English Grammar

Understanding the Basics

Looking for an easy-to-use guide to English grammar? This handy introduction covers all the basics of the subject, using a simple and straightforward style. Students will find the book's step-by-step approach easy to follow and be encouraged by its non-technical language. Requiring no prior knowledge of English grammar, the information is presented in small steps, with objective techniques to help readers apply new concepts. With clear explanations and well-chosen examples, the book gives students the tools to understand the mysteries of English grammar as well as the perfect foundation from which to move on to more advanced topics.

Introduction

Our goal in this book is to help you learn about English grammar in as simple and straightforward a way as possible. The book was inspired by our students, most of whom panic when we say words like adjective, subject, and passive. We believe that panic will be replaced by knowledge and confidence as readers work their way through this user-friendly book.

Who is this book for? It's for anyone who needs or wants to understand English grammar. That includes readers who: (1) want to improve their writing; (2) are studying a foreign language; (3) are or want to be teachers; (4) are learning English as a second language; (5) are or want to be professionals such as speech–language pathologists and attorneys; (6) are interested in how English works. The book is self-guided and self-paced; it can be used alone or as part of a course.

The workbook approach used here will move you beyond simply labeling words to an understanding of how the different pieces of a sentence fit together. To help you achieve this understanding, we present information in small steps, with many opportunities to apply each new piece of information in exercises before you move on to the next step.

Like all languages, English is a collection of dialects. While society views some of these dialects as having more social prestige than others, when we look at them objectively we find that all dialects are equal linguistically. That means that all dialects have grammatical rules, and the grammatical rules of one dialect are no more precise, pure, or logical than the grammatical rules of another dialect. Nonetheless, in this book we focus on the grammar of Standard American English because it is widely known and because writing requires a knowledge of formal, standard English.

We deliberately limit this introductory book in both content and complexity. Wherever possible, we provide you with a simple rule of thumb to use. However, we don't claim to cover all of English sentence structure. A clear understanding of what usually works will give you a foundation for recognizing and understanding the exceptions. Our aim is to provide you with the basics.

This book will clarify English sentence structure and provide you with a useful reference book that you can turn to long after you've completed the exercises. It will also provide you with a solid foundation for more advanced study.

So take a deep breath and turn the page. We predict that it won't hurt a bit. In fact, you may be surprised to find out how easy English Grammar can be.

How to use this book

What are the features of this book that will help you use it effectively?

- We assume no prior knowledge of English grammar. Depending on your background and interest, you can either work the book through from cover to cover or just read about selected topics.
- We utilize user-friendly, easy-to-understand language, avoiding excessive technical terminology.
- Information is presented in lesson format; most lessons are short, helping to make the material manageable.
- Numerous exercises allow you to test yourself after new information is presented; the exercises gradually incorporate more knowledge while building on prior information.
- Each exercise has a sample item done for you, to help you with the exercise.
- Each exercise is separated into two parts: Getting started and More practice. With each Getting started part, we provide a page reference to the answers, so you'll immediately know whether or not you're on the right track. For More practice items, answers are provided on the accompanying website.
- In addition to exercises, each lesson contains easy to find Quick tips. These provide convenient "tricks" to help you master the material or highlight the main concepts in each lesson.
- We've also included short sections called To enhance your understanding. These sections are intended for those of you who are interested in more than basic information. These sections can easily be skipped by beginners; they're not necessary for understanding any material later on in the book.
- Throughout the text, ungrammatical sentences are identified with an asterisk (*) at the beginning.

How is this book organized?

- The book has three parts: Part I deals with types of words, Part II with types of phrases, and Part III with types of sentences.
- Each part is divided into units and each unit is subdivided into related lessons.
- Each lesson contains ample Test yourself exercises. Each exercise has ten questions, with answer keys provided at the end of each unit and on the accompanying website.
- A review matching exercise with an answer key is included at the end of each part.
- Additional review exercises for each unit are provided on the companion website.
- For easy reference, the end of the book contains a list of all Quick tips, a detailed glossary, and an index.

PART I: KINDS OF WORDS

Do you shudder when you hear the words noun or verb? Don't worry – you already know all about word categories, also known as parts of speech, though you may not think you do. You know, for example, that you can say the idea and the boy but not the about* or happy the*. (As stated in the How to use this book section, an asterisk [*] is used to indicate that something is ungrammatical.) That is, you know that some words can go in some places in a sentence and others can't. A word category, or part of speech, is just a name given to a group of words that have something in common, such as where they can go in a sentence. Part I gives you a quick and easy guide to basic word categories.

UNIT 1: NOUNS

Lesson 1: Identifying nouns

Nouns are commonly defined as words that refer to a person, place, thing, or idea. How can you identify a noun?

Quick tip 1.1

If you can put the word the in front of a word and it sounds like a unit, the word is a noun.

For example, the boy sounds like a unit, so boy is a noun. The chair sounds like a unit, so chair is a noun. Compare these nouns to the very*, the walked*, the because*. Very, walked, and because are not nouns. While you can easily put the and very together (for example, the very tall boy), the very, by itself, does not work as a unit while the chair does. So, chair is a noun; very is not. (There is one kind of noun that cannot always have the in front of it; see Lesson 6 later in this unit.)

Test yourself 1.1

Which of the following words are nouns? See if they sound like a unit when you put them here: the _____. Check the appropriate column.

	Noun	Not a noun
Sample: always x

Getting started (answers on p. 20)

- | | | |
|----------|-------|-------|
| 1. tree | | |
| 2. when | | |

Test yourself 1.2

Underline the nouns in these phrases. Test each word to see if it sounds like a unit when you put it here: the _____.

Sample: all my friends

Getting started (answers on p. 20)

- | | |
|---------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1. your red sweater | 4. many digital photos |
| 2. those boxes | 5. his very interesting article |
| 3. a few men | |

UNIT 1: NOUNS

More practice (answers on the website)

6. their carpets

9. our psychology professor

7. a hand-painted plate

10. two interesting museums

8. the court stenographer

Lesson 2: Concrete and abstract nouns

Here's an unusual sentence: He smelled the marriage. What makes this sentence unusual is that we don't generally think of the noun marriage as something that can be smelled. Some nouns are concrete: they can be perceived by our senses – they are things that we can see, hear, smell, taste, or touch. Those nouns that are not concrete are abstract. Marriage is something abstract, so it's odd to say it's being perceived by one of our senses, our sense of smell.

The nouns in Lesson 1 were all concrete nouns. Other nouns, such as marriage, are abstract; this means that they refer to things that you cannot perceive with your senses, things you cannot see, smell, feel, taste, or touch. Here are some more concrete and abstract nouns:

Concrete	Abstract newspaper	love
heel	honesty
glass	culture jewelry	mind

Quick tip 2.1

Concrete nouns refer to things we can perceive with one of our senses. Abstract nouns cannot be perceived by our senses.

Test yourself 2.1

Decide if each noun is concrete or abstract.

Sample: discussion abstract

Getting started (answers on p. 20)

- muffin
- violin
- freedom
- elegance
- train

More practice (answers on the website)

- friend
- friendliness
- economics
- dormitory
- capitalism

Test yourself 2.2

Which of the following words are nouns? See if they sound like a unit when you put them here: the _____. The nouns will all be abstract nouns. Check the appropriate column.

	Noun	Not a noun
Sample: confusion x

UNIT 1: NOUNS

Getting started (answers on p. 20)

- 1. concept
- 2. shockingly
- 3. wrote
- 4. conversation
- 5. interview

More practice (answers on the website)

- 6. ran
- 7. secret
- 8. her
- 9. death
- 10. job

An abstract noun is sometimes easier to identify if you create a sentence with it. For example, the happiness is a unit, as can be seen in The happiness on her face delighted him. Thus, happiness is a noun. Here are some other abstract nouns in sentences; the nouns are underlined.

1. It was not the complaint which bothered him.
2. They were attempting to stop the abuse.
3. The joy which they felt was obvious.

Another easy way to identify a noun, especially an abstract noun, is to put the word his (or other words like it – see Lesson 21) in front of it and see if it sounds like a unit. For example, his complaint, his happiness, his concern all are units; therefore, complaint, happiness, and concern are nouns.

Quick tip 2.2

If you can put his in front of a word and it sounds like a unit, the word is a noun.

Test yourself 2.3

Which of the following words are nouns? See if they sound like a unit when you put them here: his _____. The nouns will all be abstract nouns. Check the appropriate column.

	Noun	Not a noun
Sample: obligation	x

Getting started (answers on p. 20)

- 1. jumped
- 2. appropriate
- 3. popularity
- 4. emotions
- 5. real

More practice (answers on the website)

- 6. closed
- 7. celebration
- 8. their
- 9. news
- 10. spoken

Test yourself 2.4

Which of the following words are nouns? These are a mix of concrete and abstract nouns. Check the appropriate column.

	Noun	Not a noun
Sample: while		x

Lesson 2: Concrete and abstract nouns

Getting started (answers on p. 21)

1. repair
2. intelligence
3. a
4. skis
5. us

More practice (answers on the website)

6. obstruction
7. pounds
8. disgraceful
9. complicated
10. since

Test yourself 2.5

Underline the nouns in the sentences below. In this exercise, the nouns will all have the or his in front of them. Some will be concrete and some will be abstract. Some sentences have more than one noun.
Sample: His answer wasn't helpful.

Getting started (answers on p. 21)

1. She read the play over again.
2. The actions became monotonous.
3. He felt that his marriage, his relationship with her, was strong.
4. The time had finally come to confess the truth.
5. He's the boy who delivers the paper.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The glitterati always like to follow the fashion of the day.
7. They will repair his stove.
8. The arrangement was good for all of them.
9. The audience stared at the screen, fascinated by the action they were seeing.
10. The definition was in his dictionary.

The nouns are underlined in the following sentences:

4. This author lives with her husband.
5. Do most people proceed contentedly through life?
6. Your photograph of that child sleeping won you a prize.

As you can see from these sentences, while the _____ or his _____ are ways to test a word to see if it's a noun, a noun doesn't necessarily have the or his in front of it in every sentence. Since we can say the author, the husband, the people, his life, the photograph, his child, and his prize, the underlined words in sentences 4–6 are each nouns.

Test yourself 2.6

Underline the nouns in the sentences below. In this exercise, the nouns will not all have the or his in front of them. Just test each word to see if it can be a noun.

Sample: The repair of my camera went smoothly.

Getting started (answers on p. 21)

1. I wrote every word of the letter.
2. The house was near the city.
3. Why did he get on an elevator?
4. She has my phone.
5. Your younger brother was busy.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. A group of three generals sent the troops away.
7. The flag was near your desk.
8. My mother acted in a play.
9. He called the house every day.
10. You have to give her salary and benefits.

UNIT 1: NOUNS

It's important to realize that the same word can often be used as more than one part of speech. For example, repair can be used as a noun (example: The repair was relatively inexpensive), as an adjective (example: The repair manual was not very helpful), or as a verb (example: He needs to repair the washing machine). We'll talk about verbs and adjectives in Units 2 and 4, respectively.

Lesson 3: Singular and plural nouns

What's the difference between cat and cats? The noun cat is used when it refers to only one cat; its form is singular. The noun cats is used when it represents more than one cat; its form is plural. Thus, the singular and plural forms tell us about number. Below are some nouns in their singular and plural forms.

Singular	Plural
box	boxes
bed	beds
kite	kites
day	days
country	countries
man	men
child	children

Test yourself 3.1

Underline each noun in the sentences below and indicate whether it is singular (SG) or plural (PL). There may be more than one noun in a sentence.

Sample: They used her computer (SG) to download the files (PL).

Getting started (answers on p. 21)

1. He had a few good ideas.
2. The boys spoke in a quiet whisper.
3. The tourists greeted the queen with attitudes of respect.
4. My neighbor is a neurologist.
5. The exterminator found bugs in the office.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Sharks live in water.
7. Yesterday, I caught a big trout.
8. There are many beautiful homes on this block.
9. Visitors to this country must obtain visas.
10. His cousin fought in a brutal battle to free ninety hostages.

Regular and irregular plurals

Usually, we pluralize a noun by adding an "s" to it, as in books; these nouns are called regular. There are a handful of nouns that are pluralized in other ways; these nouns are called irregular.

Irregular nouns form their plural in different ways. Here are some common patterns:

1. changing a vowel: man/men, for example
2. adding "ren" or "en": child/children, for example
3. adding nothing: fish/fish, for example
4. changing "f" to "v" and then adding "s": knife/knives, for example

Test yourself 3.2

Underline each plural noun in the sentences below and indicate if it is regular (REG) or irregular (IRREG) in terms of how it is pluralized.

Sample: The women (IRREG) received their education at some exclusive schools (REG).

UNIT 1: NOUNS

Getting started (answers on p. 21)

1. The doctor treated most of the patients who were waiting.
2. The geese crossed the road near my car.
3. She set a trap to catch the mice that had invaded her kitchen.
4. You will have to feed the oxen most afternoons.
5. Whenever I travel to the countryside, I see many sheep, ducks, deer, and cows.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Those husbands and wives lead interesting lives.
7. Her feet have grown since last year.
8. The back window of my apartment overlooks about a dozen roofs.
9. The salesmen surrounded me in the showroom.
10. Kenneth had to buy two bottles of disinfectant to get rid of the lice in his bathroom.

To enhance your understanding

What is the plural of the “word” blun? Even though you’ve probably never seen this nonsense word, you’re likely to say its plural is bluns. That’s because we don’t have to memorize the ending of regular plurals; we simply use our plural formation rule: “add s.” But the forms for irregular plural words, like children and men, need to be memorized since they don’t follow a consistent pattern.

To further enhance your understanding

Earlier we said that we usually pluralize a noun in English by adding an “s” to it. There’s actually more to it than that, when one examines the pronunciation of regular nouns more closely.

Here are some regular English nouns:

A	B
cat	dog
lip	bee
myth	car
laugh	deal

Say each word in column A out loud, adding its plural ending. (Don’t whisper, or this won’t work.) You’ll notice that, as you expect, you’re adding an [s] sound to each word. (Symbols in square brackets [] indicate sounds rather than letters.) Now say each word in column B out loud, adding its plural ending. If you listen carefully, you’ll notice that you’re not adding an [s] sound to each word to make it plural. You’re actually adding a [z] sound! (If English is not your native language, you may not be doing this.)

It turns out that we learned, when we were acquiring English as children, that it is the last sound, and not letter, of a regular noun that determines whether we add [s] or [z]. Some sounds (voiced sounds) are made with our vocal cords vibrating, like the strings of a guitar. Try this: hold your hand touching your throat, about where a man’s Adam’s apple is, while you say and hold a [v] sound ([v v v v v . . .]). You’ll feel the vibration of your vocal cords.

Other sounds (voiceless sounds) are made with our vocal cords not vibrating. Now touch your hand to your throat again and this time say and hold an [f] sound ([f f f f . . .]); you will notice the lack of vibration.

So how do we know whether to say the plural with an [s] or [z] sound? If the last sound of a word is a voiceless sound, we add an [s] sound to make it plural. If the last sound of a word is a voiced sound, we add a [z] sound to make it plural. This is not a rule that someone has ever taught us, but part of our unconscious knowledge of English.

Notice that having an [s] sound after voiceless sounds makes sense: [s] itself is voiceless. By the same reasoning, having a [z] after voiced sounds also makes sense: [z] itself is voiced. So what you can see is that the last sound of the noun and the sound of the regular plural share the same voicing characteristic: either the vocal cords vibrate for both sounds, or they don't.

You may have noticed that there's actually a third type of regular noun. Say the following words out loud, adding the plural ending to each:

glass	garage
maze	church
wish	judge

These words all already end in sounds (again, not letters) that are either [s] or [z] or sounds very similar to them. They are all "noisy" sounds. For the plural forms of these words, we add a vowel sound (written with the letter e) followed by a [z] sound (but written with the letter s): glasses, mazes, wishes, garages, churches, judges. If you think about it, pronouncing a vowel between the noisy sound at the end of the noun and the noisy sound [z] of the plural makes sense: without that vowel, we would have two noisy sounds in a row, something that would be harder for the listener to hear clearly.

Wow! You may want to just pause for a moment here and contemplate the complexity of what you know about your language. And you knew how to do this before you even went to kindergarten! You just haven't known that you know it.

Lesson 4: Animate and inanimate nouns

Take a look at the following sentence:

1. The postcard saw the mailman.

What's strange about this sentence? What's strange is that we don't expect a postcard, which is not alive, to be able to see something; only things that are alive have the ability to see. Nouns that refer to things that are alive are called animate, while nouns that refer to things that are not alive are called inanimate. Postcard is an inanimate noun and using it as an animate one makes for a very unusual sentence.

Quick tip 4.1

Animate nouns refer to things that are alive; inanimate nouns refer to things that are not alive.

Test yourself 4.1

Decide if each noun is animate or inanimate.

Sample: apple inanimate

Getting started (answers on p. 21)

1. word
2. lizard
3. glasses
4. calendar
5. baby

More practice (answers on the website)

6. criminal
7. furniture
8. doctor
9. mouse
10. truck

Now take a look at the following sentence:

2. The dog wrote a best-selling novel.

Again, there's something strange here. We know that dog is animate. However, only a special type of animate noun has the ability to write a best-selling novel: a human noun. The following sentence is fine, since teacher is a human animate noun: My teacher wrote a best-selling novel. On the other hand, since dog is a nonhuman animate noun, sentence 2 does not sound right.

To summarize: nouns may be human animate (teacher), nonhuman animate (dog), or inanimate (postcard).

Test yourself 4.2

Decide if each noun is animate or inanimate. If a noun is animate, decide if it is human or nonhuman.

Sample: chair inanimate

Lesson 4: Animate and inanimate nouns

Getting started (answers on p. 21)

6. tablecloth
 7. recipes
 8. assassin
 9. shark
 10. freedom

Lesson 5: Count and noncount nouns

Let's take a closer look at the noun hand. Notice that you can say the following:

the hand a hand hands

Here are some other nouns which demonstrate the same pattern:

the store a store stores
 the idea an idea ideas
 the tissue a tissue tissues

Let's compare hand to the noun furniture. As with hand, we can say the furniture. But we can't say a furniture* or furnitures*. Here are some other nouns which demonstrate the same pattern as furniture:

the dust *a dust *dusts
 the energy *an energy *energies
 the biology *a biology *biologies

Thus, there are some nouns that can be counted, and so we can use a or an with them and can also make them plural. These nouns are called, appropriately, count nouns. Hand is a count noun. So are store, idea, and tissue.

There are other nouns that typically are not counted, and so we do not use a or an with them and do not typically make them plural. These nouns are called, also appropriately, noncount nouns. (Another name for a noncount noun is a mass noun.) Furniture is a noncount noun. So are dust, energy, and biology.

You may well be saying to yourself, "Wait a minute. I can count furniture. I can say something like: three couches and three chairs make six pieces of furniture." And of course, you'd be right. But notice that in this sentence, the words couch and chair can be made plural, but not the word furniture. And the word piece can be made plural, but, again, not the word furniture.

Quick tip 5.1

If you can pluralize a noun in a sentence, it is functioning as a count noun.

Note that a noun is considered to be a count noun if it can be made plural, even if it's not plural in a particular sentence. Thus, in the sentence I ate a cookie, cookie is a count noun because one could pluralize it to cookies without changing its basic meaning.

Test yourself 5.1

For each underlined noun in the sentences below, indicate if it is count (C) or noncount (NC). Use the plural test to help you.

Lesson 5: Count and noncount nouns

Sample: Her hairstyle (C) clearly revealed her face.

Getting started (answers on p. 22)

1. The lights () of the city () twinkled.
2. I love eating rice ().
3. His anger () was barely under control.
4. Her job () was rather demanding.
5. Many types of information () are available at the library ().

6. The police () will be here in a moment.
7. He leaned on the handle () and cursed.
8. I was so thirsty, I needed three glasses () of water ().
9. How much money () do you make in an hour ()?
10. By 11P.M., the train-station () was nearly empty.

There is also another good way to decide if a noun is count or noncount. Take a look at the use of the words much and many in the following sentences.

1. He has many children.
2. That man has many interests.
3. That will take too much time.
4. They have many lights on in the house.
5. We have much furniture in our store.
6. I wonder how much wealth is in Silicon Valley.

As you may have noticed, many is used with count nouns, much is used with noncount nouns.

Quick tip 5.2

If you can use many with a noun (when it is pluralized), it's a count noun. If you can use much with a noun, it's a noncount noun.

And we have still another way to distinguish count from noncount nouns:

7. He has fewer children than I do.
8. That man has fewer interests than he used to.
9. That will take less time than I thought.
10. They have fewer lights on in the house.
11. We have less furniture in our store.
12. I don't have less money in my purse than you have.

As you've probably figured out from these examples, we use fewer with count nouns and less with noncount nouns.

Quick tip 5.3

If you can use fewer with a noun (when it is pluralized), it's a count noun. If you can use less with a noun, it's a noncount noun.

Test yourself 5.2

For each underlined noun in the sentences below, indicate if it is being used as a count (C) or noncount (NC) noun in that sentence. Use the plural, much/many, or fewer/less tests to help you. Sample: Their new album (C) was a huge hit.

10. The reporters () wrote the story ().

To enhance your understanding

Many nouns can be used as either count nouns or as noncount nouns, depending on how they are being used in a specific sentence. Let's look at the following sentence containing the word sugar:

13. The sugar is spilling onto the floor.

In this sentence, is sugar being used as a count or noncount noun? Would you say: The sugars are spilling onto the floor? or Many sugars are spilling onto the floor? Probably not. So sugar, in sentence 13, is a noncount noun.

Now take a look at another sentence with sugar:

14. This gourmet shop has sugars I've never even heard of.

In this sentence, is sugar being used as a count or noncount noun? First, notice that sugar here is pluralized. Second, notice that you can say This gourmet shop has many sugars I've never even heard of. So sugar, in sentence 14, is a count noun. In terms of meaning, what is important here is that the sentence is talking about different types of sugars, say, brown sugar, white sugar, confectioners' sugar, etc.

And one more sentence type with sugar:

15. The sugar that works best in this recipe is brown sugar.

Here, sugar, while not pluralized, could be pluralized and refers, in fact, to a kind of sugar. For example, you could say: The sugars that work best in this recipe are brown sugar and white sugar. For these reasons, sugar is being used here as a count noun.

Here are some more examples of sentences with nouns which, like sugar, are typically used as noncount nouns but can also be used as count nouns.

16a. I like to drink milk. (milk used as noncount noun)

16b. That store has milks with different kinds of flavoring: chocolate, vanilla, mocha, and strawberry. (milks used as count noun)

- 16c. The milk that is the healthiest is nonfat milk. (milk used as count noun)
- 17a. A plentiful supply of water is important for a community's survival. (water used as noncount noun)
- 17b. There are different kinds of gourmet waters on the market these days. (waters used as count noun)
- 17c. The water I usually order in restaurants is imported. (water used as count noun)

Lesson 6: Proper and common nouns

Do the following sentences look a little strange?

1. Mrs. smith took the 10th grade class of lincoln high school to france for a trip.
2. The class visited paris and was thrilled to see the eiffel tower.

Normally, we capitalize the first letter of nouns that are actual names, no matter where they are in a sentence. Let's look at the same sentences with the names capitalized:

3. Mrs. Smith took the 10th grade class of Lincoln High School to France for a trip.
4. The class visited Paris and was thrilled to see the Eiffel Tower.

Nouns that are actual names are called proper nouns; nouns that are not names are called common nouns. Notice that not only people have names: places (Rome), companies (IBM), and books (Gone With the Wind), among others, can have names, too.

Quick tip 6.1

Nouns that are actual names, for example Mary, are called proper nouns. Nouns that are not names are called common nouns, e.g. girl.

Quick tip 6.2

One way to identify a proper noun is to ask yourself: is this a noun I would capitalize, no matter where it is in a sentence? If so, it's a proper noun.

Test yourself 6.1

For each noun below, determine if it is a proper noun or common noun. For this exercise, the proper nouns are not capitalized.

To enhance your understanding

In Lesson 1 we said that words that can have the in front of them and sound like a complete unit are nouns. That still works. The reverse, however, is not true: not all proper nouns can have the in front of them. Compare the following proper nouns. Those on the left use the; those on the right do not.

- | | | |
|-------|-----------------------|-----------------------|
| 5. a. | The United States | Great Britain |
| | The Netherlands | France |
| b. | The Holy See | Holy Cross University |
| c. | The Jolly Green Giant | Big Foot |
| d. | The Bronx | Manhattan |

Most proper nouns don't use the – just think of the names of people you know. Those few cases where a proper noun does use the are exceptions; we memorize those.

UNIT 2: VERBS

Lesson 7: Identifying verbs

What's a verb? Verbs are words that usually express an action. Here are two easy ways to identify a verb; you can use either one.

Quick tip 7.1

If a word can have should in front of it and the phrase sounds complete, the word is a verb. Examples: should leave, should sail, should discover, should complain. Leave, sail, discover, and complain are all verbs.

Quick tip 7.2

If a word can have to in front of it and the phrase sounds complete, it's a verb. Examples: to leave, to sail, to discover, to complain. Leave, sail, discover, and complain are all verbs. (Note that we're not talking here about two, too, or the to that indicates direction, as in Let's go to the park.)

Here are some examples of verbs. You can see that they all meet the test with should and the test with to.

go:	should go	to go
tell:	should tell	to tell disagree:	should disagree	to disagree
spell:	should spell	to spell

In contrast, the following words do not pass the should or to test:

coffee:	*should coffee	*to coffee
beautiful:	*should beautiful	*to beautiful hardly:	*should hardly	*to hardly under:	*should under	*to under

Thus, coffee, beautiful, hardly, and under are not verbs.

Lesson 8: The verb base

Sometimes a verb changes its form. Let's look at the following sentences. The verb is underlined in each one.

1. John should study.
2. John studied.
3. John is studying.
4. John studies.

You certainly can't say, John should studied*, or John to studied, so how do we know that studied is a verb? To test the word, you have to see if it can follow should or to in a different form, not necessarily in the form that you see in a particular sentence. For example, if you see John studied, ask yourself if there's a different form of studied that can follow should or to. In this case there is: John should study or John decided to study. So study and all its forms are verbs. The form of the verb that follows should or to is called the base form or infinitive form. The term infinitive is used to refer either to the base form alone (for example, study), or to the to + base form (for example, to study).

Let's put each of these verbs into its base form. The base form is underlined.

5. working: (should, to) work
6. believed: (should, to) believe
7. written: (should, to) write
8. wore: (should, to) wear
9. throws: (should, to) throw

Lesson 9: Action verbs and linking verbs

The verbs we have looked at so far, such as go, sing, and revise, all indicate actions. In fact, they're called action verbs. However, there are other verbs which don't indicate actions. These are most commonly called linking verbs. One example of such a verb is the word seem, as in the sentences, You seem tired, They've seemed busy lately. Don't worry, though: seem still follows our should or to rules: Harry should seem surprised at times; You don't want to seem arrogant, do you? So even though seem isn't indicating an action, it's easy to identify it as a verb. Other examples of linking verbs are resemble and become. Linking verbs express a relationship between the noun or pronoun that comes before the linking verb and whatever follows it. (For pronouns, see Unit 7.)

Test yourself 9.1

UNIT 2: VERBS

The most common linking verb is the verb be, often called the copula. You can see different forms of the verb be in the following sentences.

1. I am happy.
2. You are happy.
3. He is happy.
4. I was happy.
5. You were happy.
6. I have been happy.
7. He is being happy.

Notice how different these forms are from the base form of be. In fact, be is the most irregular verb in the English language: it has more forms than any other verb. But you can still use the should or to test to identify be as a verb: You should be happy, They decided to be happy. For convenience, the forms of be are indicated in Quick tip 9.1.

Quick tip 9.1

The forms of the irregular verb be are: am, are, is, was, were, be, been, being.

Note that be and become are two different verbs. Here are the forms of become: become, becomes, became, becoming.

Test yourself 9.3

Underline the forms of be in each of the sentences below. Some sentences may contain more than one form of be.

Identify the verb in each of the following sentences. You may have to put some in their base forms and test each word with should or to in order to be sure of your answer. Each sentence has only one verb. The verbs in this exercise will be either action or linking verbs.

Sample: Bridget spent hours in the dusty old bookstore.

Getting started (answers on p. 43)

6. It seemed late.
7. Johnny packed all our things.
8. Mother is always right about that.
9. She went down to the basement.
10. I felt wonderful about my decision.

How can you determine if a verb is being used as an action verb or a linking verb? There are a number of differences between them. One way is to think of a linking verb as an equal sign (=). For example:

12. Harry resembles his brother.
Harry = his brother.
13. You are bored.
You = bored.
14. That strange looking vegetable tastes awful.
That strange looking vegetable = awful.

Resembles, are, and tastes are each being used here as linking verbs.

Another way to identify a linking verb is to see if you can substitute a form of be for it, and leave the meaning basically the same. For example, take the sentence John seems interested in the conversation. We can substitute a form of be, specifically, is, for seems: John is interested in the conversation. Thus, seems is a linking verb in the sentence John seems interested in the conversation. Take a look at some more examples.

15. After a while, the hotel became dingy.
After a while, the hotel was dingy.
16. Annie and Janine look surprised.
Annie and Janine are surprised.

Lesson 9: Action verbs and linking verbs

17. Although in his eighties, he remains youthful-looking.

Although in his eighties, he is youthful-looking.

Thus, became, look, and remains are being used as linking verbs in these sentences. Remember that be and its forms can also be used as linking verbs. While Quick tip 9.2 below isn't foolproof, it will usually help you identify whether a verb is an action or linking verb.

Quick tip 9.2

If you can substitute a form of be for a verb and the meaning of the sentence is basically the same, the verb is probably being used as a linking verb. The verb be and its forms are also linking verbs.

Another way to identify a linking verb is to see if you can substitute a form of the word seem for it, and leave the meaning basically the same. For example, in the sentence, The hot shower felt soothing, we can substitute a form of seem for felt, and leave the sentence largely unchanged: The hot shower seemed soothing. Note the following examples:

18a. After a while, the hotel became dingy.

18b. After a while, the hotel seemed dingy.

19a. Annie and Janine look surprised.

19b. Annie and Janine seem surprised.

20a. Although in his eighties, he remains youthful-looking.

20b. Although in his eighties, he seems youthful-looking.

Thus, became, look, and remains are being used as linking verbs in these sentences. Again, while Quick tip 9.3 below also isn't foolproof, it will help you identify whether a verb is an action or linking verb.

Quick tip 9.3

If you can substitute a form of seem for a verb and the meaning of the sentence is basically the same, the verb is probably being used as a linking verb.

Test yourself 9.9

Decide if the underlined verbs in the sentences below are action or linking verbs. In this exercise, if it's a form of be, it's being used as a linking verb. If it's not a form of be, use the be or seem substitution tests to see if the verb is being used as a linking verb.

6. Jimmy is always eager to answer any questions.
7. Finding a healthy meal on the menu proved easy.
8. He's not as smart as he led me to believe.
9. We could hear the neighbors arguing for hours.
10. That sounds good to me.

Test yourself 9.10

Underline the verb in each sentence below and decide if it's being used as an action or linking verb. In this exercise, if the verb is a form of be, it's being used as a linking verb. If it's not a form of be, use the be or seem substitution tests to see if the verb is being used as a linking verb.

	Action	Linking
Sample: The policeman gave him a ticket.	x

Getting started (answers on p. 43)

1. They became best friends.
2. It is not nearly the same as mine.
3. Unfortunately, I forgot your birthday this year.
4. I went to the corner bakery.
5. Mark remains a legend to this day.

6. Trigonometry bores me.
7. Babies often get hungry.
8. No one got a C on the midterm exam.
9. It's much ado about nothing.
10. He made such a fuss over a minor mistake.

Hopefully you now have a good sense of the difference between action and linking verbs. However, there are some verbs that can be used as either an action verb or a linking verb, depending on the sentence that it's in. Compare, for example, the following two sentences with feel:

21. Mary felt tired.
22. Mary felt the softness of the material.

In sentence 21, felt is being used as a linking verb. Note that Mary = tired; Mary is tired, Mary seems tired all make sense here. In sentence 22, Mary is doing an action. Also, one can't think of it as: Mary = the softness of the material*, Mary was the softness of the material*, or Mary seemed the softness of the material*. That is, thinking of felt as an equal sign or substituting a form of be or seem for felt clearly doesn't work here. Thus, in sentence 22, felt is being used as an action verb.

Lesson 9: Action verbs and linking verbs

Here are a few more examples:

23. The dinner at that restaurant tasted delicious. (linking verb)
(The dinner at that restaurant was delicious.)
24. I tasted the soup. (action verb)
(*I was the soup.)
25. The flowers smelled heavenly. (linking verb)
(The flowers are heavenly.)
26. She smelled the fire before she saw it. (action verb)
(*She was the fire before she saw it.)

To enhance your understanding

Another important difference between action and linking verbs is that a linking verb can be followed by just an adjective, while an action verb cannot:

27. She is tired. (Tired is an adjective.)
28. The mayor looked victorious. (Victorious is an adjective.)
29. *She washed tired.
30. *The mayor voted victorious.

As you can see, is and looked are linking verbs in these sentences; washed and voted are action verbs. However, since we haven't yet talked about adjectives (see Lesson 16), just keep this in mind as another difference between the two types of verbs.

To further enhance your understanding

Compare the following two sentences:

31a. She looked careful. (careful is an adjective)

31b. She looked carefully. (carefully is an adverb)

Can you sense the difference? In sentence 31a the verb looked is a linking verb, followed by the adjective careful; the basic meaning of the sentence is She looked like she was a careful person. In contrast, in sentence 31b looked is an action verb, followed by the adverb carefully (adverbs will be discussed in Lesson 27); the basic meaning of this sentence is She looked around in a careful manner. Quick tip 9.4 identifies yet another difference between linking verbs and action verbs.

Quick tip 9.4

Linking verbs are followed or modified by adjectives, while action verbs are followed or modified by adverbs.

Test yourself 9.12 – Grand finale

If you can do this exercise, you've achieved a basic understanding of nouns and verbs.

In each sentence below, underline the nouns and put a squiggly line under each verb. Each sentence has only one verb but may have more than one noun.

Sample: The judges were unanimous in their decision.

Getting started (answers on p. 43)

1. Their daughter announced her engagement later.
2. The surgeon washed his hands.
3. The pianist was diligent.
4. The young boy gritted his teeth.
5. Her assistant is always late.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The mayor explained his position.
7. The train came early.
8. Three other customers placed orders that day.
9. Her friend was helpful.
10. That hot meal tastes great.

Lesson 10: Transitive and intransitive verbs

Take a look at the following questions, each with an action verb.

1. What did you write?
2. Who did you annoy?
3. What did you throw?

These are all perfectly fine questions and easy to answer, e.g. I wrote a letter, I annoyed my neighbor, I threw a ball.

Now compare the first group of questions to the next group, each of which also has an action verb.

4. *What did you sleep?
5. *What did you die?
6. *Who did you arrive?

These questions are all strange and can't really be answered. That's because the verbs in this second group are verbs that do not act on anything.

Thus, you can see that there are two kinds of verbs. One kind, such as write, annoy, and throw, acts upon something. The noun (or noun phrase; see Lesson 28) that the verb acts upon is called the direct object of the sentence. (You'll learn more about direct objects in Lesson 39.) Those verbs that act on something are called transitive verbs. Typically, in statements, a transitive verb is followed by the noun (or noun phrase) that it is acting upon.

Other verbs, such as sleep, die, and arrive, do not act upon something. In fact, these verbs can't have a direct object. Notice that you can't say, for example: I usually sleep the dog, They'll arrive the book. Those verbs that do not act on something and appear in sentences that do not have a direct object are called intransitive verbs.

Quick tip 10.1

Action verbs that act upon something are called transitive verbs. Action verbs that do not act upon something are called intransitive verbs.

Quick tip 10.2

If a verb (in any of its forms) can be put in one of the following slots, it is transitive: (a) What did you _____? (b) Who did you _____? If a verb cannot be put in one of these slots, it is intransitive.

So, which of the following verbs are transitive and which intransitive?

7. What did you discover?
8. *What did you struggle?
9. Who did you meet?
10. *What did you laugh?

Since sentences 7 and 9 are fine questions, discover and meet are transitive verbs. Since sentences 8 and 10 are not acceptable questions, struggle and laugh are intransitive verbs. Note that although you can say something like, What did you struggle with? or, What did you laugh at?, you can't ask the questions as they are stated above, and so the verbs are intransitive.

UNIT 2: VERBS

There's also another way to decide if a verb is transitive or intransitive:

Quick tip 10.3

If a verb (in one of its forms) can be put in one of the following slots, it is transitive:

(a) He _____ something. (b) He _____ someone.

Quick tip 10.4

If a verb (in one of its forms) can be put in the following slot, it is intransitive:

He _____.

Let's use these Quick tips to decide which of the following verbs are transitive and which are intransitive:

11. He discovered something.
12. He met someone.
13. He struggled.
14. He laughed.

Quick tip 10.3 helps identify the verb discovered in sentence 11 and the verb met in sentence 12 as transitive. Quick tip 10.4 helps identify the verb struggled in sentence 13 and the verb laughed in sentence 14 as intransitive.

Test yourself 10.1

Decide if each of the verbs below is transitive or intransitive. Use Quick tips 9.2, 9.3 and 9.4 to help you decide.

- 15b. I ate dinner.
- 16a. She dances well.
- 16b. She dances the tango well.
- 17a. The audience left.
- 17b. The audience left the theater.

Lesson 10: Transitive and intransitive verbs

You can see that there are verbs, such as eat, dance, and leave, that can be used as either transitive or intransitive verbs.

Quick tip 10.5

Some verbs can be either transitive or intransitive. These can occur in both of the following slots: (a) He _____ something / someone. (b) He _____.

10. My dog licked my face playfully.

Lesson 11: Phrasal verbs

While most verbs are single words, some are phrasal: they contain two words. In phrasal verbs, the first word is a verb and the second word is called a particle. Here are some examples, with the phrasal verbs underlined:

1. She looked up the answer.
2. We will just drop off the files.
3. The professor pointed out the correct answer.

Notice that the meaning of a phrasal verb is often similar to the meaning of a single verb:

4. She looked up the answer.
She researched the answer.
5. We will just drop off the files.
We will just deliver the files.
6. The professor pointed out the correct answer.
The professor identified the correct answer.

Quick tip 11.1

If you can substitute a single verb for a verb and the word following it, you probably have a phrasal verb. For example, you can say, She pointed out the truth to us or She showed the truth to us. Point out is a phrasal verb.

We can also still identify phrasal verbs using our to _____ or should _____ Quick tips:

to look up	should look up
to warm up	should warm up
to point out	should point out

Test yourself 11.1

Each of the sentences below contains a phrasal verb. Underline the phrasal verb, using the verb substitution tip and the to _____ and should _____ tips to help you.

Sample: The lecturer summed up his main points.

Getting started (answers on p. 44)

1. He fixed up the lighting in the hall.
2. They read over the document many times.
3. You dream up the most amazing things.
4. Ron takes out the garbage every Monday night.
5. I will pay off my mortgage in fifteen years.

Lesson 11: Phrasal verbs

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Yesterday, the company's president handed in her resignation.
7. She took over the entire operation.
8. Unfortunately, the buyer of my property blew off the deal.
9. It is obvious that she cooked up the whole story.
10. You bring up an interesting point.

In many cases, the two parts of a phrasal verb, the verb and its particle, can be separated:

7. She looked the answer up.
8. We will just drop the files off.
9. The professor pointed the correct answer out.

Even when the two parts are separated, it's still a phrasal, or multi-word, verb. When you can separate the two parts in this way, you know that you've got a phrasal verb.

Quick tip 11.2

If you can move a particle away from its verb, you have a phrasal verb. For example, since you can say both She looked up the answer and She looked the answer up, look up is a phrasal verb.

Test yourself 11.2

Underline the phrasal verbs in each of the sentences below. The particle will not necessarily be next to its verb.

Sample: The students will hand their assignment in tomorrow.

Getting started (answers on p. 44)

1. Mr. Parker helped out his neighbors.
2. You should call the agency up.
3. Those children put on a show.
4. What brought this reaction about?
5. The hurricane tore the roofs of many houses off.

6. The first member of the relay team passed off the baton successfully.
7. The herdsman gathered all his sheep in.
8. Debbie kept up her grades in graduate school.
9. I took my glasses off quickly.
10. Last month the bank signed the deed over to me.

In some cases, a particle cannot be separated from its verb:

10. She asked for the receptionist.
11. The lawyer objected to the defendant's statement.
12. He will look into the judge's decision.

UNIT 2: VERBS

In these cases, you cannot say:

13. *She asked the receptionist for.
14. *The lawyer objected the defendant's statement to.
15. *He will look the judge's decision into.

So Quick tip 11.2 is not useful in these cases; you have to rely on the verb substitution test and the to and should tests.

Test yourself 11.3

Some of the sentences below contain a one word verb and some contain a phrasal verb. Underline the one word verb or phrasal verb in each sentence.

Sample: They owed her a lot of money.

Getting started (answers on p. 44)

1. Eat up your dinner!
2. The girls will put the puzzles away.
3. I understand that concept.
4. Birds fly south for the winter.

7. The show ran far too long.
8. They checked out the scenery around their hotel.
9. The pitcher threw the batter out in the eighth inning.
10. The butcher opened his store up at 7 A.M.

To enhance your understanding

Take a look at these groups of sentences:

- | | |
|--|--|
| 16. She looked up the answer. | She looked the answer up . |
| *She looked up it. | She looked it up . |
| 17. We will just drop off the children. | We will just drop the children off . |
| *We will just drop off them. | We will just drop them off . |
| 18. He pointed out the other girl. | He pointed the other girl out . |
| *He pointed out her. | He pointed her out . |

As you can see, in some cases (those with an asterisk), a particle cannot be next to its verb; the two parts must be separated. As a matter of fact, this is true in all of those cases where the direct object of the verb (what the verb is acting upon) is one of the following words: me, you, him, her, it, us, them. You might recognize these words as pronouns. You'll learn about these pronouns in Lesson 21, about direct objects in Lesson 39, and more about verbs and their particles in Lesson 30.

UNIT 3: DETERMINERS

Determiners are words that can occur directly before a noun, tell us a bit more about that noun, and introduce it. The determiners are underlined in the sentences below, with the following noun in bold:

1. I milked the cow.
2. It is Harry's turn.
3. They bought that house.
4. John has more money.

These sentences have examples of the four major types of determiners: articles, possessives, demonstratives, and quantifiers. Generally, a noun will have only one of these determiner types in front of it. We'll be discussing each of these four types in this unit, starting with articles, the easiest and most common.

Lesson 12: Articles

How can you identify an article?
It doesn't get any easier than this!

Quick tip 12.1

There are only three articles in English: the, a and an.

Articles give us information about a noun; they indicate whether or not the noun is a specific one known to both the speaker and listener. Take a look at these examples to see what we mean:

1. I bought a red car. (The listener doesn't know anything about the red car.)
2. The red car was on sale. (The listener knows which car the speaker is talking about.)

The is commonly called the definite article; a and an are called indefinite articles. The definite article may be used with both singular and plural nouns, but the indefinite articles only with singular nouns, as we can see in the following examples:

the idea	the ideas
an apple	*an apples
a revolution	*a revolutions

Test yourself 12.1

Underline the articles in each of the sentences below. A sentence may have more than one article.
Sample: We watched a video last night.

Getting started (answers on p. 55)

1. The last week of the month was a busy one in the store.
2. Summer was a special time for Melissa.
3. There's an unusual idea floating around.
4. I turned a corner in the long hall.
5. A dirty spoon had fallen to the floor.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. In the middle of the night, I heard a strange noise.
7. Jackie turned off the road too soon.
8. Your mother's favorite actor appeared in the show we saw last night.
9. A pear is just as tasty as an apple, as far as I am concerned.
10. The guys bought two cans of paint: an orange one and a beige one.

Lesson 12: Articles

What's the difference between a and an? See if you notice a pattern when you look at these examples:

a red tablecloth	an ancient right
a situation	an interesting message
a boring lecture	an intruder

The articles a and an have the same meaning and use. The only difference between them is that a is used when the next word begins with a consonant sound, while an is used when the next word begins with a vowel sound.

To enhance your understanding

What about a uniform and an hour? Do these contradict what we've said about when to use a and an? It certainly looks like a is being used before a vowel, and an is being used before a consonant. But in fact, that's not the case. These phrases follow the rule perfectly. Remember that a is used when the next word begins with a consonant sound. The first letter of the next word doesn't matter; only its first sound matters.

So what's the first sound of the word uniform? Say it out loud and listen carefully. You will hear that the first sound of the word is the sound [y], as in yes. We really say "y-uniform" (and also "y-unicorn," "y-usual," etc.). Since "y," a consonant, is the first sound, we use a before uniform.

What's the first sound of the word hour? Say the word out loud, and you will notice that in fact we don't pronounce the letter "h." Rather, hour begins with a vowel sound, as in the word our, and so we say an hour.

Thus, apparent exceptions, like a uniform and an hour, are not exceptions at all.

Test yourself 12.2

For each sentence, underline each article with a solid line, each noun with a double underline, and each verb with a squiggly line. Some sentences have more than one article and noun; some have no article. If you can answer these questions, you have achieved a solid understanding of how to identify articles, nouns, and verbs, three of the most common parts of speech!

10. Nowadays Elena takes skiing lessons at least once a week.

Lesson 13: Demonstratives

Here's another easy category. There are only four demonstratives: this, that, these, and those.

Quick tip 13.1

There are only four demonstratives in English: this, that, these, and those.

Notice again that, just like articles, each of these can occur directly before a noun: this table, these tables, that idea, those ideas. Demonstratives are words that “point” to something or someone.

Test yourself 13.1

Underline the demonstrative in each of the sentences below.

Sample: Those performers were all also composers.

Getting started (answers on p. 55)

1. You can use this book.
2. Those speeches he gave were impressive.
3. They don't speak that language.
4. Kirsten sold all these items.
5. This side of the Atlantic Ocean is more familiar to me.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. She likes to listen to that song.
7. Those mistakes will catch up with Andrew one day.
8. I don't like these pictures.
9. That man is a technician.
10. Lots of people like to patronize this restaurant.

Test yourself 13.2

Underline the determiners in the sentences below. They will be either articles or demonstratives.

Sample: There were shops selling a variety of those handmade items.

Getting started (answers on p. 55)

1. On top of the pile of fabrics was a sleeping cat.
2. That leader met with the residents of the village.
3. This taxi is heading toward a large shopping mall.
4. The instructor chose a very informative textbook.
5. These pants won't fit in those drawers.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The audience is tired of all those lame jokes.
7. Once in a while I think of my childhood friends.
8. Those pedestrians better keep to the right of the main road.
9. This work is the brainchild of a madman.
10. We found this piece of paper on the top shelf of a dusty bookcase.

Test yourself 13.3

Identify each determiner in the sentences below by underlining it with a solid line if it is a demonstrative and with a squiggly line if it is an article.

Sample: Larry is holding this meeting at the hotel.

Getting started (answers on p. 55)

1. Are you looking for a better job?
2. That movie follows a young family after they immigrate to this country.
3. Jane met an Englishman there whom she later married.
4. The weather was so wonderful at the beach.
5. All those cups of coffee won't help you get a good night's rest.

Lesson 14: Possessives

Possessives are words that indicate ownership or belonging. The possessives are underlined in the sentences below.

1. I sold my car.
2. Betty's neighbor is an architect.

The possessive in sentence 1 is called a possessive pronoun; the possessive in sentence 2 is called a possessive proper noun. Notice that, just like articles and demonstratives, possessive pronouns and possessive proper nouns can appear directly before a noun. We'll discuss each of these separately.

Possessive pronouns

There are just a few possessive pronouns that function as determiners. These are commonly referred to as possessive pronouns with determiner function or possessive adjectives. We will call them simply determiner possessive pronouns. (For another function of possessive pronouns, see Lesson 24.)

Quick tip 14.1

The determiner possessive pronouns are: my, your, his, her, its, our, their.

Test yourself 14.1

Underline the determiner possessive pronoun in each of the sentences below.
Sample: My school won the state championship last year.

Getting started (answers on p. 55)

1. His face always shows what he's thinking.
2. They go to their house in the mountains every summer.
3. It took three days for your letter to get here.
4. We liked her mother.
5. Our product is superior to what you have to offer.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The price of the stock I am considering buying does not reflect its true worth.
7. Would you like to take a ride in your new car?
8. Friends, I will be counting on your votes.
9. The children went to the movies together with their father.
10. Matt does not share his feelings easily.

Possessive proper nouns

The possessive proper nouns are underlined in this next sentence:

3. I saw Mary's cat chase Mrs. Smith's dog, which ran across Jim's yard.

Lesson 14: Possessives

Remember, names do not have to be names of just people. For example, London's, America's, and IBM's are each possessive proper nouns: London's bridges, America's highways, IBM's products. (See Lesson 6 to remind yourself about proper nouns.)

To enhance your understanding

While possessive proper nouns can function as determiners, possessive common nouns (see Lesson 6), for example the girl's hat, are considered to be adjectives. (See Lesson 16 for more about adjectives.) This is because possessive common nouns, but not possessive proper nouns, can have a determiner in front of them – keeping in mind that a noun will generally have just one determiner introducing it. See the following examples:

4. The girl's hat is new. (girl's = possessive common noun)
5. *The Mary's hat is new. (Mary's = possessive proper noun)

Test yourself 14.2

Underline the possessive proper noun in each of the sentences below.

Sample: Gone With the Wind's cast was amazing.

Getting started (answers on p. 56)

1. Leah's eyes met those of the man at the counter.
2. It was Harry's turn to say something.
3. They were impressed by Rome's restaurants.
4. Mickey Mouse's picture is hanging on my wall.
5. John always wanted to visit Harvard's campus.

8. Mrs. Johnson's office is located directly above mine.
9. After dinner, we went up to Beth's apartment.
10. I never get tired of The Beatles' songs.

Test yourself 14.3

Underline the possessive determiner in each of the sentences below. The determiner will either be a possessive pronoun or a possessive proper noun.

Sample: Your committee is meeting tomorrow.

Getting started (answers on p. 56)

1. She suggested that it was all Martin's fault.
2. Why don't you give it to your daughter?
3. That was a breathtaking view of New York's skyline.
4. He bought a souvenir for his son.

8. Those children love to take a dip in their new pool in the backyard.
9. On her way to work, Maggie's car broke down.
10. Jet Blue's crew served dinner while I was sleeping.

Lesson 15: Quantifiers

There are words, such as every and several, that indicate amount, or quantity, and these are called quantifiers. Quantifiers can act as determiners; that is, they can come before and introduce a noun. The determiners are underlined in the following sentences:

1. All businesses need to have a budget.
2. Some people like eating eel.
3. She enjoyed few things as much as food.

Some common quantifiers are listed below:

all	enough	much
any	every	neither
both	few	no
each	little	several either	most	some

Quick tip 15.1

Words of quantity, quantifiers, can act as determiners and precede a noun. Some examples are: all, some, several, and much.

Test yourself 15.1

Underline the quantifier in each of the sentences below. The quantifiers will all be from the list above. Sample: I met several chefs at that school.

Getting started (answers on p. 56)

1. There is no writer who is as famous as Shakespeare.
2. Enough money was raised to build a new wing on the hospital.
3. I don't take much sugar in my coffee.
4. With little effort, I solved the crossword puzzle.
5. All experiments test hypotheses.

 FOR A REVIEW EXERCISE OF THIS UNIT, SEE THE WEBSITE.

UNIT 4: ADJECTIVES

Lesson 16: Identifying adjectives

An adjective is a word that refers to a characteristic of a noun. How can you identify an adjective?

If you can put a word between the and a noun (like boy, or idea), then that word is an adjective.

Quick tip 16.1

If you can put a word between the and a noun (for example, the _____ boy), then that word is an adjective.

For example, since we can say the tall boy, tall is an adjective. Similarly, we can say the silly boy, the interesting boy, and the young boy. Therefore, silly, interesting, and young are all adjectives.

A number of adjectives, all used in the phrase the _____ boy are listed below. The adjectives are underlined:

1. the brilliant boy
2. the embarrassed boy
3. the blonde boy
4. the hungry boy
5. the delightful boy

Compare these phrases to the very boy*, the a boy*, and the talk boy*. Very, a, and talk are not adjectives.

What do adjectives actually do? Adjectives always tell us something about a noun. Another way of saying this is that they modify a noun. In the phrases we've just looked at, the underlined adjectives tell us something about, or modify, the noun boy.

Test yourself 16.1

Which of the following words are adjectives? See if they sound right when you put them here: the _____ thing. Check the appropriate column.

	Adjective	Not an adjective
Sample: have x

Lesson 16: Identifying adjectives

Test yourself 16.2

Underline the adjectives in the sentences below. In each case, the adjective will be between the and a noun. A sentence may have more than one adjective.

Sample: She has been the strong leader of this company for years.

Getting started (answers on p. 63)

1. The strange robots marched towards the city.
2. It was the last day of school.
3. We tugged at the enormous gate.
4. The billowing smoke alerted us to the fire.
5. The sudden sandstorm forced the surprised bathers to flee the beach.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. She received the exciting news in the noisy restaurant.
7. The blind beggar was sitting at the busy corner.
8. Jeremy did not get the subtle humor of the play.
9. The poor people of the world outnumber the rich ones.
10. Keep your hands off the hot stove!

As we've said, a good way to decide if a word is an adjective is to see if it can be placed between the and a noun. But that doesn't mean that that's the only place where an adjective can occur; it's just a way to test a word to see if it's an adjective.

Here are some sentences where the adjective is in a different place. In each case, the adjective is underlined.

6. He is a tall boy.
7. My best friend loves chocolate cake.
8. The house had a low roof.
9. Large cars are harder to drive than small cars.

Let's make sure that each of the underlined words above passes the adjective test, that is, that it can appear between the and a noun.

10. tall: the tall boy
11. best: the best movie
12. chocolate: the chocolate bar
13. low: the low ceiling
14. large: the large window
15. small: the small window.

As you can see, each of these words passes the adjective test. Notice also that each of these words describes a characteristic of a noun.

Test yourself 16.3

Use the adjective test to find the adjectives in each of the sentences below. A sentence may have more than one adjective.

Sample: It took a long time to arrive at our next destination.

UNIT 4: ADJECTIVES

Getting started (answers on p. 63)

1. Evenings were a special time for the family.
2. The next week was a busy one in the store.
3. There's an unusual idea floating around.
4. I turned a corner in the long hall.
5. A dirty fork had fallen to the floor.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. I wrote a boring letter.
7. Mary's younger brother was already there.
8. The American flag was behind Edward's desk.
9. I could see his face in the red light from the exit sign.
10. We gathered the important facts from those dusty books.

What do you notice about the underlined adjectives in the phrases below?

16. the delicious rich cake
17. my tall, red-haired, entertaining friend
18. a bright, colorful, blue, striped pattern

As you can see, a noun can have more than one adjective modifying it. In fact, there is no limit to the number of adjectives that can modify a noun (except the patience and tolerance of the listener!).

Test yourself 16.4

Underline the adjectives in each of the sentences below. Some of the nouns will be modified by more than one adjective.

Sample: She ate all the crisp, crunchy chips.

Getting started (answers on p. 63)

1. They went off to see an old, gloomy, historic mansion in southern England.
2. She had anticipated his sudden arrival.
3. Angela ignored his annoying, persistent questions.
4. I must get rid of my decrepit, banged-up little old car.
5. We wouldn't want to cross this wide, busy street, would we?

8. The lovely young lady read one of her favorite novels on her comfortable sofa.
9. Why did you buy this outdated computer in the first place?
10. The Dodgers' frustrated manager benched his brash young pitcher.

Remember that sometimes a word can function as one word category, or part of speech, in one sentence, and as another word category in another sentence (see Lesson 2). For example, let's look at the word cream. In the sentence I brought the cream, cream is a noun. But in the sentence That's a cream cake, cream is an adjective, telling us more about the noun cake.

Test yourself 16.5

In each of the sentences below, decide if the underlined words are functioning as nouns or adjectives.

Sample: That copy isn't legible. adjective

UNIT 5: PREPOSITIONS

Lesson 17: Identifying prepositions

What is a preposition? The prepositions are underlined in the following sentences.

1. She made notes on the paper.
2. My office is between the post office and the laundromat.
3. I'll meet you after work.

Quick tip 17.1

Prepositions are words, usually small, that typically indicate information about direction, location, or time. There is only a small number of prepositions in English. Some commonly used examples are at, from, in, on, and to.

The following are common prepositions:

about	beneath	into	throughout
across	between	near	to
after	beyond	of	toward(s)
against	by	off	under
along	despite	on	until
among	down	onto	up
around	during	out	upon
at	for	over	with before	from	since	within
behind	in	through	without

6. I saw ...

Well, you get the idea.

What are conjunctions? Conjunctions are connectors. They are words, such as and, that join words, phrases and sentences together. Some other conjunctions are underlined in the sentences below.

7. He didn't respond much, just occasionally said "yes" or "no."
8. They take life seriously but are still fun to be around.
9. I thought that he was crazy.
10. Adam left the room before Tabitha could say another thing.
11. Just turn right when you get to the corner.

There are different kinds of conjunctions. We'll look at coordinating conjunctions first.

Lesson 18: Coordinating conjunctions

Coordinating conjunctions connect any two units that are the same type. For example, they can connect two sentences, two nouns, two verbs, two determiners, two prepositions, or two adjectives.

Quick tip 18.1

There are three common coordinating conjunctions in English. They are: and, or, and but. Four less common ones are for, so, yet, and nor.

Quick tip 18.2

A commonly used way to remember the coordinating conjunctions is to think of FANBOYS: F (for), A (and), N (nor), B (but), O (or), Y (yet), S (so).

But given that and, or, and but are the most common, you'll be in good shape if you just remember those.

The coordinating conjunctions in the sentences below are underlined.

1. You asked my friend, and then the other two came as well.
2. I go or he goes.
3. It wasn't dark but the moon was out.

In these sentences, you can see that the coordinating conjunction has a complete sentence on either side of it. (The sentences on either side are in bold.) Thus, the conjunction in these examples is connecting two sentences.

In the next group of sentences, you can see that the coordinating conjunction has a noun on either side of it. Thus, the conjunction is joining two nouns. The nouns are in bold.

4. The children had milk and cookies.
5. People study medicine or dentistry when they enroll at that institution.

In the next sentences, the coordinating conjunction is joining two adjectives. The adjectives are in bold.

6. That restaurant is known for healthy and nutritious food.
7. I'm buying either the striped or paisley wallpaper.

Test yourself 18.1

Underline the coordinating conjunction in each sentence below. Remember that the coordinating conjunctions are: and, or, but, for, so, yet, nor.

Sample: The old carpet was worn out but the furniture looked relatively new.

Lesson 19: Subordinating conjunctions

Another kind of conjunction is called a subordinating conjunction. Here are some examples of sentences with subordinating conjunctions. The subordinating conjunctions are underlined.

1. She continued arguing until everyone finally agreed with her.
2. They live down south when the weather gets cold.
3. Jack will buy a house once he gets a job.
4. She listened to his comments politely, even though they sounded silly.
5. They stopped talking when it was Eleanor's turn.

Subordinating conjunctions connect sentences; however, the two parts that are connected are not of equal value in terms of the meaning of the whole sentence. There is a main sentence with a subpart; the subordinating conjunction connects the subpart to the main sentence. Here are sentences 1 through 5 again, but this time with the main sentences in bold.

6. She continued arguing until everyone finally agreed with her.
7. They live down south when the weather gets cold.
8. Jack will buy a house once he gets a job.
9. She listened to his comments politely, even though they sounded silly.
10. They stopped talking when it was Eleanor's turn.

Quick tip 19.1

Subordinating conjunctions connect a sentence with another sentence, which is a subpart of it. The subpart sentence is called a dependent clause (or subordinate clause). In the following sentence, the subordinating conjunction is underlined and the dependent clause is in italics: Nick decided to try to escape, although he knew his chances were slim.

The common subordinating conjunctions are listed below.

after	even though	than	whenever
although	how	that	where
as	if	though	wherever
as if	in order that	till	whether as though	once	unless	which because	rather than	until	while before	since	what	who
even if	so (that)	when	why

You can see that sometimes a subordinating conjunction consists of more than one word.

Test yourself 19.1

Underline the subordinating conjunctions in the sentences below. Use the list above to help you.

UNIT 6: CONJUNCTIONS

Sample: She was so tired that she didn't bother brushing her teeth.

Getting started (answers on p.79)

1. I'll leave the note here because I'm in a hurry.
2. Nick had coached him thoroughly, even though they hadn't had much time.
3. He could see the faint glow of a pipe that Dr. Walters had lit.
4. You should stay here since they obviously need you.
5. She hasn't called here although she'd said she would.

6. Jake would be free once he reached the fence.
7. You were behaving as if you were the boss.
8. They were determined to go for a walk, unless it was going to rain.
9. Kevin should think twice before he speaks.
10. I am going to finish this job even if it takes hours.

Here are the same sentences we saw earlier, but this time with the dependent clauses in italics; the subordinating conjunctions are still underlined.

11. She continued arguing until everyone finally agreed with her.
12. They live down south when the weather gets cold.
13. Jack will buy a house once he gets a job.
14. She listened to his comments politely, even though they sounded silly.
15. They stopped talking when it was Eleanor's turn.

Notice that the subordinating conjunction is always the first word of the dependent clause.

Quick tip 19.2

The subordinating conjunction is always the first word of the dependent clause.

In all of the examples we've looked at so far, the dependent clause has come after the main sentence. But sometimes the dependent clause comes before the main sentence. In the following examples, the subordinating conjunctions are underlined, and the main sentences are in bold:

16. If he knew the truth, her father would throw the doll away.
17. When I brought my first paycheck home, I wanted to frame it.
18. Once he gets a job, Jack will buy a house.
19. When it was Eleanor's turn, they stopped talking.

Notice that sentences 18 and 19 are the same as sentences 13 and 15, except that in sentences 18 and 19 the subordinating conjunction and the rest of the dependent clause come before the main sentence rather than after it.

Test yourself 19.2

Underline the subordinating conjunction in each of the sentences below. In each of these sentences, the dependent clause comes before the main sentence.

Sample: Although he was not happily married, he remained faithful to his wife.

To enhance your understanding

Don't confuse conjunctions with prepositions. Some words may function as either:

- 20a. I've been working hard, for I hope to be promoted. (Coordinating conjunction: connects two sentences.)
- 20b. I've been working hard for IBM. (Preposition: introduces a noun.)
- 21a. John left before they served dinner. (Subordinating conjunction: connects two sentences.)
- 21b. John left before dinner. (Preposition: introduces a noun.)

Lesson 20: Correlative conjunctions

1. Both the windows and the doors need to be replaced.
2. Either I cook or we order take-out.
3. Neither the French nor the British were willing to surrender.
4. If that's a problem, then let me know.

You can see that the underlined conjunctions in these sentences come in pairs, for example both/and. The two parts “go together” in these sentences, even though they're not next to each other. These conjunction pairs are called correlative conjunctions.

Quick tip 20.1

Correlative conjunctions are two-part conjunctions. Common correlative conjunctions are: both/and, either/or, if/then, neither/nor.

Test yourself 20.1

Underline the correlative conjunctions in the sentences below. Don't forget to underline both parts.
Sample: Either the Democratic or the Republican candidate will win.

UNIT 7: PRONOUNS

As Melissa entered the door of the dimly lit Cathedral, Melissa held tightly to Melissa's backpack. Suddenly, Melissa thought that Melissa saw a shadow moving. "This is scary," whispered Melissa to Melissa.

What's strange about the sentences in the above text? What is strange is that they're missing pronouns, words that replace nouns in a sentence. You'll probably agree that these next sentences are a vast improvement on the first version:

As Melissa entered the door of the dimly lit Cathedral, she held tightly to her backpack. Suddenly, she thought that she saw a shadow moving. "This is scary," whispered Melissa to herself.

We may never find out what happens to Melissa, but replacing Melissa with pronouns like she and her makes her far more palatable.

As far as pronouns go, there's bad news and there's good news. The bad news is that there are a number of different kinds of pronouns. The good news is that there are only a few pronouns of each type. Look at the pronouns themselves and get a feel for the kinds of words they are. Some of the types may have long labels, but the pronouns themselves are usually short words.

Lesson 21: Subject and object pronouns

Subject pronouns

Let's look at the following sentences:

- 1a. Diplomats travel extensively.
- 1b. They travel extensively.
- 2a. Professor Susan Fields chaired the meeting.
- 2b. She chaired the meeting.
- 3a. Ben plays cards every week.
- 3b. He plays cards every week.

Notice that in each sentence pair, the underlined pronoun replaces the underlined noun. The underlined noun is doing the action in the sentence and comes before the verb. This kind of noun is called the subject of the sentence and the pronoun that replaces it is called a subject pronoun.

Now let's examine these sentences:

- 4a. Biology is her favorite subject.
- 4b. It is her favorite subject.
- 5a. Bob seems happy.
- 5b. He seems happy.
- 6a. Mrs. Peters becomes agitated easily.
- 6b. She becomes agitated easily.

Notice again that in each sentence pair, the underlined pronoun replaces the underlined noun. Here, the underlined nouns come before linking verbs (see Lesson 9); although they are not performing an action, they are still considered to be subjects. Again, the pronoun that replaces the subject is a subject pronoun.

There are only seven subject pronouns; they are listed in Quick tip 21.1.

Quick tip 21.1

The subject pronouns are: I, you, he, she, it, we, they.

Test yourself 21.1

Underline the subject pronouns in the sentences below.

Sample: We wandered around town, looking for a place to have lunch.

Getting started (answers on p. 99)

1. I crossed the piazza and headed towards the church.
2. Unfortunately, it was closed.
3. They simply stood there, waiting for me.
4. Yesterday, she went shopping.
5. We should get together sometime.

6. He is the grandson of an immigrant from Italy.
7. We often dream about important things.
8. You have been to their house for dinner.
9. They often have interesting discussions.
10. Last night they drove to San Francisco.

Object pronouns

- 7a. Karen bought the red car.
- 7b. Karen bought it.
- 8a. The prize was given to Steve and Bill.
- 8b. The prize was given to them.
- 9a. I'm watching the baby.
- 9b. I'm watching her.

The underlined nouns in the sentences above are not subjects. Rather, they are objects: they either follow the main verb or they follow a preposition. (For more on objects, see Unit 13.) Pronouns that replace objects, like those underlined in sentences 7b, 8b, and 9b above, are called object pronouns.

There are only seven object pronouns; they are listed in Quick tip 21.2.

Quick tip 21.2

The object pronouns are: me, you, her, him, it, us, them.

You can see that two pronouns, you and it, are particularly hardworking: they can function as either subject or object pronouns.

Test yourself 21.2

Underline the object pronouns in each of the sentences below. There may be more than one pronoun in a sentence.

Sample: Churchill called them to a meeting.

8. He went too far this time.
9. Theresa's parents worried about her.
10. She hears from him often.

You know that when you're talking about yourself, you use the pronouns I or me, and when you're talking about a group of people, you use the pronouns they or them. That is, we choose different pronouns depending on the person or thing the pronouns refer to. Pronouns that vary in this way are called personal pronouns. Subject and object pronouns are types of personal pronouns; see Lessons 22 and 24 for two other kinds.

Personal pronouns that refer to the speaker in a conversation, like I and we, are called first person pronouns. Those that refer to the listener, like you, are called second person pronouns. And those that refer to anyone or anything else, like he or they, are called third person pronouns.

In addition, pronouns that refer to only one person or thing, like I and he, are called singular pronouns; those that refer to more than one person or thing, like we and they, are called plural pronouns.

Here's a complete breakdown of the subject and object pronouns:

	Subject	Object
First person singular	I	me
Second person singular	you	you
Third person singular	he, she, it	him, her, it
First person plural	we	us
Second person plural	you	you
Third person plural	they	them

Lesson 22: Reflexive pronouns

Do the following sentences seem strange to you?

1. John Smith saw John Smith in the mirror.
2. My friends were talking among my friends.
3. Sam's only cat was grooming Sam's only cat.

These sentences are strange because they're missing reflexive pronouns, those pronouns that end in -self or -selves. As you can see from the sentences below, we use reflexive pronouns whenever we refer to the same person or thing more than once in the same basic sentence. Sentences 1–3 should be stated like this:

4. John Smith saw himself in the mirror.
5. My best friends were talking among themselves.
6. Sam's only cat was grooming herself.

Here are some more examples, first without and then with a reflexive pronoun.

- 7a. The boy washed the boy.
- 7b. The boy washed himself.
- 8a. Tom and Harry watched Tom and Harry on the video.
- 8b. Tom and Harry watched themselves on the video.
- 9a. You can see you doing that.
- 9b. You can see yourself doing that.

Notice that if we hear, for example, The boy washed the boy, without a reflexive pronoun, then we assume that someone's talking about two different boys. Similarly, the sentence He shaved him suggests that the person (a male) who did the shaving and the person (a male) who received the shaving are not the same. The reflexive pronoun lets the listener know that the speaker is referring to the same person or thing.

Quick tip 22.1 lists the reflexive pronouns. They're easy to identify because they all end in -self or -selves (Quick tip 22.2).

Quick tip 22.1

The reflexive pronouns are: myself, yourself, himself, herself, itself, ourselves, yourselves, themselves.

Quick tip 22.2

All the reflexive pronouns end in -self (singular) or -selves (plural).

Test yourself 22.1

Underline the reflexive pronouns in each of the sentences below.

Sample: That computer is so smart it can repair itself.

UNIT 7: PRONOUNS

Getting started (answers on p. 99)

1. John was a person who always pushed himself to the limit.
2. Watch yourself!
3. We prided ourselves on being silly.
4. The directors of that company can blame no one but themselves.
5. I see myself as a successful writer someday.

7. Rosanna treated herself to a lavish vacation.
8. I wish my car started itself in the dead of winter.
9. Would everyone in the room please identify himself?
10. You should take better care of yourself!

Test yourself 22.2

Underline the reflexive, subject, and object pronouns in each of the sentences below. Label each as reflexive, subject, or object. Some sentences will have more than one pronoun.

Sample: Greta's perseverance benefitted both herself and the rest of the staff. (reflexive)

Getting started (answers on p. 99)

1. I have found that I can do it when the room is quiet.
2. He noticed that she often immersed herself in a book.
3. We have known her for years.
4. Some guests told us that they forced themselves to get up at 6 A.M.
5. You don't need to explain yourself to me.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Mr. Ballantine said that he appreciated us.
7. If you want to leave, please let me know.
8. Who among us wants to commit himself to another year of service?
9. Jay's wife promised herself never to do it again.
10. Reflexive pronouns are easy to identify, don't you agree?

Lesson 23: Demonstrative pronouns

Do you remember the underlined words in the sentences below?

1. Are you sure you want this?
2. We agreed about that.
3. I'm not sure I like these.
4. Those look delicious.

In Lesson 13 we talked about the use of demonstratives before a noun, for example: this dog, that idea, these songs, those curtains. That is, we talked about demonstratives used as determiners. But demonstratives can also be used without a noun following them, as you can see from sentences 1–4. In these cases, because the demonstrative replaces a noun (or noun phrase), it is called a demonstrative pronoun. For example, in sentence 1, the demonstrative pronoun this can be replacing a noun such as spaghetti or magazines.

It's easy to remember demonstrative pronouns, because there are only four of them; they are listed in Quick tip 23.1.

Quick tip 23.1

There are only four demonstrative pronouns: this, that, these, and those.

It might help you remember the word “demonstrative” if you think of these words as “demonstrating” something, in a way, pointing to something.

Test yourself 23.1

Underline the demonstrative pronoun in each of the sentences below.

Sample: Lenny wasn't sure he really wanted those.

Getting started (answers on p. 100)

1. That wasn't really Hannah's job, but I appreciate her doing it anyway.
2. Natasha really likes these.
3. He wasn't good at riddles but managed to solve those.
4. I never thought it would come to this.
5. These are very difficult times.

Lesson 24: Possessive pronouns

You won't be surprised to learn that possessive pronouns are pronouns that indicate possession, or ownership. Some possessive pronouns are underlined here:

1. Mr. Smith explained his ideas to the audience.
2. I wish I could accept their invitation.
3. That suitcase isn't mine.
4. Yours was the best essay in the class.

If you look closely, you'll notice that the possessive pronouns in sentences 1–4 fall into two groups. The ones in sentences 1 and 2 are followed by a noun: his ideas, their invitation. The ones in sentences 3 and 4 are not followed by a noun; rather, they stand on their own in the sentence. We'll talk about each kind separately.

The possessive pronouns in sentences 1 and 2 may look familiar to you. That's because they were described in Lesson 14, as part of our discussion of determiners. Like articles (a, an, the), possessive pronouns which function as determiners can occur in the slot _____ house (for example, his house, our house, your house). Since they function as determiners, you can understand why they are followed by a noun. In Quick tip 14.1 we called these determiner possessive pronouns and provided the full list. We repeat them here: my, your, his, her, its, our, their.

Test yourself 24.1

Underline the determiner possessive pronoun in each of the sentences below. Remember: determiner possessive pronouns are followed by nouns.

Sample: Many of our ideas back then were equally absurd.

Getting started (answers on p. 100)

1. The woman hid her feelings well.
2. He was younger than his wife.
3. Mr. and Mrs. Bradford adored their son.
4. Thomas and Natalie were the best students in my class.
5. Your eyes look very tired.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The salesman's car does not show its age.
7. We should just pack up our things and get out of here.
8. I took a look at your face and I knew immediately that you were honest.
9. My daughter is very good about brushing her teeth regularly.
10. Gamblers are secretive about their losses.

Now on to the possessive pronouns in sentences 3 and 4, the kind that can stand alone in a sentence. Here are some more examples:

5. The Greens' tent came loose in the storm but ours remained secure.
6. Yours was the first card I noticed.
7. The scientist hurried from that laboratory to mine.

UNIT 7: PRONOUNS

These possessive pronouns replace a whole noun (actually, a whole noun phrase, but we haven't gotten to that yet; see Lesson 28). And since the word nominal means "noun-like," these pronouns are sometimes called possessive pronouns with nominal function. We will simply call them nominal possessive pronouns.

Quick tip 24.1

Nominal possessive pronouns replace a whole noun (or noun phrase). For example, instead of saying That book is Sally's book we can simply say, That book is hers. The nominal possessive pronouns are: mine, yours, his, hers, its, ours, theirs.

Notice that the pronouns his and its can function either as determiner possessive pronouns (see Quick tip 14.1) or as nominal possessive pronouns (see Quick tip 24.1).

To enhance your understanding

Don't confuse possessive pronouns with contracted pronouns:

- 8a. It's (= it is) a wonderful day. (contracted pronoun)
- 8b. Its positives outweigh its negatives. (determiner possessive pronoun)
- 9a. You're (= you are) absolutely right. (contracted pronoun)
- 9b. Your shoelaces are untied. (determiner possessive pronoun)
- 10a. They're (= they are) leaving. (contracted pronoun)
- 10b. Their leaving early was unexpected. (determiner possessive pronoun)

As you can see, the contracted pronoun is always written with an apostrophe.

Test yourself 24.2

Underline the nominal possessive pronoun in each of the sentences below.

Sample: Pete and Cathy are convinced the idea was theirs.

Getting started (answers on p. 100)

Lesson 25: Interrogative pronouns

What do you notice about the underlined words in the following sentences?

1. Who went first?
2. What was the man carrying?
3. Which did you buy?

You undoubtedly recognize them as question words. They are called interrogative pronouns; we list them in Quick tip 25.1.

Quick tip 25.1

Interrogative pronouns are question words. The interrogative pronouns are: how, what, when, where, which, who, whom, whose, why. Look for the question mark to help find them.

You may be wondering why these are considered to be pronouns. Like other pronouns, interrogative pronouns represent something else, often a noun. They represent missing information, information that's in the answer to a question:

- 4a. Who went first?
- 4b. Harry went first.
- 5a. What was the man carrying?
- 5b. The man was carrying a camera.
- 6a. Which did you buy?
- 6b. I bought the red car.

Since, when we ask a question, we don't yet know what the answer will be, we have no choice but to use a question word, or interrogative pronoun, to represent the information we are asking about.

To enhance your understanding

Don't confuse the following – they sound the same:

- 7a. Who's (= who is) there?
- 7b. Whose party are we going to?

Test yourself 25.1

Underline the interrogative pronoun in each of the sentences below.

Sample: Why is his approach so exciting?

Getting started (answers on p. 101)

1. To whom did you send the package?

10. Our ball club prides itself on its ability to win most of our games.

To further enhance your understanding

As we discussed at the beginning of this Lesson, interrogatives function as pronouns – they replace nouns. Note, however, that some interrogatives can also function as determiners – they can precede a noun. You can see this in the examples below:

8. Which book did you read last?
9. Whose purse is on the table?
10. What name did they choose for their baby?

Lesson 26: Relative pronouns

Here are some sentences with interrogative pronouns, like the ones you've already seen in Lesson 25. The interrogative pronouns are underlined.

1. Who was laughing?
2. Whose is this?

Now look at the following sentences, which contain the same underlined words. How are these sentences different from sentences 1 and 2?

3. I like the woman who lives next door.
4. He's the engineer whose life was disrupted by a messy divorce.

You've probably noticed that, unlike sentences 1 and 2 above, sentences 3 and 4 are not questions. The same pronouns are being used, but not to ask a question. Instead, these pronouns are used in sentences 3 and 4 to replace a noun that's already mentioned earlier in the sentence. When used this way, these pronouns are called relative pronouns. They are listed in Quick tip 26.1.

Quick tip 26.1

The common relative pronouns are: that, which, who, whom, whose. They refer back to a noun in the sentence.

Test yourself 26.1

Underline the relative pronoun in each of the sentences below.

Sample: The prominent oil man who bought that house is not a generous man.

Getting started (answers on p. 102)

1. John's is the essay that was the most well-written.
2. His wife was the woman whom he loved the most.
3. There is no one who can make me laugh more than you.
4. Danny bought a gift which appealed to him.
5. Last week I met the man whose cousin married my friend.

6. In general, Sharon is nice to people whom she meets.
7. I will stand on the line which is shorter.
8. The person who leaves last should turn the lights off.
9. She saw the journey which she had undertaken stretch out before her.
10. Anna leaves a good impression on employers who interview her.

Let's look at sentences 3 and 4 more closely.

3. I like the woman who lives next door.

Lesson 26: Relative pronouns

In this sentence, who lives next door? Answer: the woman. So instead of saying something like I like the woman. The woman lives next door, we replace the second occurrence of the woman with the pronoun who, giving us the sentence I like the woman who lives next door. In fact, the word who is doing two things: it's representing the woman and it's joining lives next door to the main part of the sentence.

4. He's the engineer whose life was disrupted by a messy divorce.

In this sentence, whose life was disrupted by a messy divorce? Answer: the engineer's. So instead of saying something like He's the engineer. The engineer's life was disrupted by a messy divorce, we replace the second occurrence of the engineer (actually, in this case, the engineer's) with the pronoun whose, giving us the sentence He's the engineer whose life was disrupted by a messy divorce. Again, the word whose is doing two things: it's representing the engineer and it's joining life was disrupted by a messy divorce to the main part of the sentence.

In the following sentence, what broke?

5. Sam fixed the computer that broke.

Answer: the computer. So instead of saying something like Sam fixed the computer. The computer broke, we replace the second occurrence of the computer with the pronoun that, giving us the sentence Sam fixed the computer that broke. Again, the word that is doing two things: it's representing the computer and it's joining broke to the main part of the sentence.

You may remember that in Lesson 19 we talked about subordinating conjunctions, which are words that connect a sentence (the main sentence) with another sentence which is a subpart of it. The relative pronouns here are doing the same thing and in fact, relative pronouns are one kind of subordinating conjunction (and appear on the list in Lesson 19).

Quick tip 26.2

Relative pronouns are a type of subordinating conjunction. A relative pronoun typically occurs soon after the noun it refers to. Example: He liked the teacher who gave easy tests.

Test yourself 26.2

The relative pronoun is underlined in each of the sentences below. Your job is to find the noun that the relative pronoun is referring to.

Sample: I watched a few movies that were really bad. (movies)

Getting started (answers on p. 102)

1. They are men who are ambitious.
2. The salesman noticed the potatoes that he planted.
3. It is worth buying stocks which increase in value.
4. The guests whom we invited a week ago just arrived.
5. The flight that was supposed to leave at 5 is still delayed.

8. Rebecca noticed the tourists who were gathered around the statue.
9. The milk that Jane bought seems to be fresh.
10. The contractor whom we hired did not show up today.

Test yourself 26.3

Underline and identify the interrogative or relative pronoun in each of the sentences below. (Remember that the interrogative pronouns will always be in a question.) In this exercise, the sentences will only have either an interrogative or a relative pronoun, but not both.

Sample: Why are you going? (interrogative)

Getting started (answers on p. 102)

1. What can I do about it?
2. Adam is the person whom you need to talk to.
3. I fixed the clock that was broken.
4. The police will find the person who committed this crime.
5. When will the show start?

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Which do you want us to choose?
7. The restaurant in which we ate was awful.
8. I don't care for the earrings which this actress is wearing.
9. Several of the boys who attended the party became rowdy.
10. He's happy with the solution that I'm proposing.

To enhance your understanding

Notice that the word that has lots of uses. These are demonstrated here:

6. I think that man is intriguing. (demonstrative determiner)
7. I think that is the way to go. (demonstrative pronoun)
8. I think that the sun will shine tomorrow. (subordinating conjunction: introducing a clause)
9. I think the car that you want was sold yesterday. (relative pronoun: introducing a clause and referring back to a noun)

You can have more than one that within the same sentence:

10. I think that that is the cat that belongs to you.

And that's that!

To further enhance your understanding

There are also some less commonly used relative pronouns with the suffix -ever. Some examples:

11. I'll be happy with whatever you decide to do.
12. My mother always told me to marry whoever I wanted to.
13. They can travel with whomever they choose.

There is an important difference between the relative pronouns ending in -ever and those we looked at earlier and listed in Quick tip 26.1. As you can see in sentences 11–13, the -ever relative pronouns do not refer back to a noun that comes before. Rather, they represent a noun all by themselves.

UNIT 8: ADVERBS

Lesson 27: Identifying adverbs

We've saved adverbs for last because they can be a bit tricky. Adverbs do lots of different things and can be in lots of different places in a sentence. In fact, the chances are, if you don't know what else a word is, it's probably an adverb.

The adverbs are underlined in the sentences below:

1. I live here. (information about location)
2. My brother is arriving today. (information about time)
3. She dances gracefully. (information about manner)
4. That child is very sweet. (degree information about an adjective, in this case, about sweet)
5. She works extremely efficiently. (degree information about another adverb, in this case, about efficiently)

Quick tip 27.1

Adverbs generally indicate information about location, time, degree, and manner. They provide extra information about the action in a sentence, about adjectives and about other adverbs.

Quick tip 27.2

If you don't know what else a word is (and you've eliminated the other parts of speech), it's probably an adverb.

While unfortunately, we can't give you a simple rule that will help you identify adverbs 100 percent of the time, the tips below will help you correctly identify adverbs in many cases.

Quick tip 27.3

Can the word go in the following slot? Mary slept _____. If so, it's probably an adverb. For example, Mary slept peacefully. Peacefully is an adverb.

Quick tip 27.4

Can the word go in the following slot? _____, I gave / will give my speech. If so, it's probably an adverb. For example, Yesterday, I gave my speech. Yesterday is an adverb. Or: Tomorrow, I will give my speech. Tomorrow is an adverb.

Quick tip 27.5

Can the word go in the following slot? He is _____ happy. If so, it's probably an adverb. For example, He is very happy. Very is an adverb.

Quick tip 27.6

Does the word end in the suffix -ly? Is it an adjective? If it ends in -ly and it's not an adjective, it's probably an adverb (e.g. hopefully, happily, unusually).

Test yourself 27.1

Underline the adverbs in each of the sentences below.

Sample: They had deliberately been silent when they entered the room.

Getting started (answers on p. 107)

1. She returned the book and quietly left.
2. I'm leaving for Europe tomorrow.
3. That horse is an unusually calm animal.
4. The train came to a stop suddenly.
5. That remark was too shocking.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Why don't you call her sometimes?
7. We were told to handle the merchandise carefully.
8. The doctor informed his patient that his prognosis was very good.
9. The Morgans are not leaving today.
10. Unexpectedly, the principal ordered everyone into the auditorium.

Many, though not all, adverbs end in -ly (rapidly, innocently, sweetly, etc.). However, some adjectives also end in -ly, for example lovely, friendly. It's easy to distinguish them. Just remember that the adjectives can go in the slot the _____ boy: the lovely boy, the friendly boy.

While adverbs can go before the adjective, for example the extremely friendly boy (extremely is an adverb), adverbs cannot occupy the slot directly before the noun. That is, one cannot say, the extremely boy* or the innocently boy*, so extremely and innocently are not adjectives; they must be adverbs.

Note that some nouns, for example the flower lily, end in -ly as well. And just to add a little more spice to the recipe, there are some words that can be used either as adverbs or as adjectives:

- 6a. That is a pretty easy book. (Pretty is similar to the word very here, and is an adverb of degree.)
- 6b. That is a pretty child. (Pretty is an adjective.)
- 7a. You drive too fast. (Fast tells us more about the verb drive, so it is an adverb.)
- 7b. This actor's delivery was too fast. (Fast tells us more about the noun delivery, so it is an adjective.)

PART II: KINDS OF PHRASES

Just as you know a lot about word categories without necessarily realizing that you do, you know a lot about combining words into phrases and phrases into sentences. As we talk about phrases and sentences, we'll be referring to many of the word categories you learned about in Part I, so check back there if you need to.

Let's start by taking a look at the following sentence:

1. The little boy laughed.

If you were asked to divide the sentence into two parts, what would the parts be? Speakers of English typically separate the sentence after the word boy:

2. The little boy + laughed.

Other groupings, like the ones below, generally seem unnatural to native speakers of English:

3. The + little boy laughed.
4. The little + boy laughed.

That is, we all sense that the little boy forms a unit and that laughed forms another unit. Units like these are called phrases.

So we can start off our discussion by suggesting that there are two parts to sentence 1. We could call them Part A and Part B, or Harry and George, but we'll use the terminology of modern linguistics and refer to them as the noun phrase and the verb phrase. The noun phrase in our sentence is the little boy; the verb phrase is laughed. Of course, there are other phrases as well. We'll look at the most common ones in the units of Part II.

UNIT 9: NOUN PHRASES

Lesson 28: The basic structure of noun phrases

There are all kinds of noun phrases and we can discover them by seeing some of the things we can substitute for the noun phrase, the little boy. The underlined portions of the sentences below are all noun phrases and any one of them can replace the little boy in the sentence The little boy laughed.

1. Audiences laughed.
2. Younger audiences laughed.
3. The girl laughed.
4. The little girl laughed.
5. The cute little girl laughed.
6. John laughed.
7. They laughed.

Of course, there are lots of things that cannot replace the little boy, for example:

8. *My very quickly laughed.
9. *Near his laughed.
10. *Went away laughed.

You're probably not surprised to learn that My very quickly, Near his, and Went away are not noun phrases.

So what can be a noun phrase?

In sentences 1–6, the noun phrases all have something in common: each consists of at least a noun. (See Unit 1 to refresh your memory about nouns.)

Here are the noun phrases again, with the nouns underlined:

audiences younger audiences
 the girl
 the little girl
 the cute little girl
John

In sentence 1, Audiences laughed, and in sentence 6, John laughed, the noun phrase consists of just a noun: audiences in sentence 1 and John in sentence 6.

Quick tip 28.1

A noun phrase can consist of a noun alone, for example, audiences, John.

Test yourself 28.1

Underline the noun phrase in each of the sentences below. In this exercise, the noun phrase will always consist of a noun alone. Some sentences may have more than one noun phrase.

Sample: Sugar is not very healthy.

UNIT 9: NOUN PHRASES

Getting started (answers on p. 119)

1. Pirates were looking for treasure.
2. Furniture can be expensive.
3. Boys often want to be policemen.
4. People think money is useful.
5. Jeremy was eating rice.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Sometimes juries make mistakes.
7. Jenny visited friends yesterday.
8. Oil is thicker than water.
9. Joel hates bananas.
10. Writers often like to work alone.

You can also see, in sentences 2–5, that a noun phrase can have other words in addition to just a noun. Let's see what those other words can be:

younger audiences:	adjective + noun
the girl:	determiner + noun
the little girl:	determiner + adjective + noun
the cute little girl:	determiner + adjectives + noun

(See Units 3 and 4 to remind yourself about determiners and adjectives.)

Quick tip 28.2

A noun phrase can consist of a determiner, one or more adjectives, and a noun. The determiner and adjective(s) are optional.

Test yourself 28.2

Underline the noun phrases in each of the sentences below. In this exercise, the noun phrase will always consist of a determiner + noun; the determiner will always be an article, that is, the, a, or an. Some sentences may have more than one noun phrase.

Sample: A man stole the car.

Getting started (answers on p. 119)

1. The winner was overjoyed.
2. The crowd dispersed peacefully.
3. A minute can seem like an eternity.
4. The dentist gave the patient a toothbrush.
5. The couple forgot to tip the waiter.

6. A Mercedes costs more than a Chevy.
7. The Andersons bought a house.
8. The children are sleeping.
9. The lake is near the village.
10. The professor paid the student a compliment.

Here are some more examples with different determiners and nouns. (You may recall from Unit 3 that the determiner always comes before the noun.) The whole noun phrase is underlined.

Lesson 28: The basic structure of noun phrases

11. A man laughed.
12. Her friend laughed.
13. That lady laughed.
14. Many people laughed.

Notice that these noun phrases don't have to appear only at the beginning of the sentence:

15. The criminal is a man.
16. I looked at her friend.
17. Do you know that lady?
18. The clown made many people laugh.

Test yourself 28.3

Underline the noun phrases in each of the sentences below. In this exercise, the noun phrase will always consist of a determiner (any kind) + noun. Some sentences may have more than one noun phrase.

Sample: My hat blew off in the wind.

Getting started (answers on p. 119)

1. His doorman hailed a taxi.
2. As the doctor toured the ward, a group of her interns went along.
3. Your daughter looks great in this picture.
4. Some people keep their jewelry in a safe deposit box.
5. Jack's friend is an artist.

7. Several spectators wanted that ballplayer thrown out of the game.
8. The train pulled into the station.
9. Most people are proud of their country.
10. Andrea's grandmother used to bake a pie in her kitchen for her grandchildren.

Here are examples of noun phrases consisting of a determiner plus an adjective plus a noun (the whole noun phrase is underlined):

19. The best fruit is grown on the west coast.
20. Our new shoes got completely soaked.
21. That old dog is my favorite one.
22. Every new task is challenging.

Test yourself 28.4

Underline the noun phrases in each of the sentences below. In this exercise, the noun phrase will always consist of determiner + adjective + noun. Some sentences may have more than one noun phrase.

Sample: My young cousin got on that scary roller-coaster.

Getting started (answers on p. 119)

1. That adorable baby was born in a rundown house in a small town.
2. The elderly woman wrote a short novel.
3. His crazy adventure began with those strange letters.
4. Some Enchanted Evening is a beautiful song from a classic show.
5. Jackie's famous father is a talented immigrant from a South American country.

Test yourself 28.5

For each of the underlined noun phrases below, decide if it is: determiner + noun or determiner + adjective + noun.

Sample: He was not in a reasonable mood. determiner + adjective + noun

Getting started (answers on p. 119)

- | | |

| 9. I don't care for her new attitude . | |
| 10. The motorcade passed by quickly. | |

Here are some examples where the noun phrase consists of a determiner, more than one adjective, and a noun (the whole noun phrase is underlined):

23. The dull brown liquid spilled onto his priceless antique carpet.
24. Elderly, infirm individuals really need that important health benefit.
25. A worn checkered apron hung by the sagging, unpainted kitchen door.

Test yourself 28.6

Underline the noun phrases in each of the sentences below. In this exercise, the noun phrase will always consist of determiner + adjective(s) + noun. Some sentences may have more than one noun phrase.

Sample: The pushy, aggressive salesman at the automobile dealership was not helpful.

Getting started (answers on p. 119)

- | | |

| 7. The crazy idea of your nutty sister turned out to be not so crazy after all. | 10. This poor, hungry man is craving a hearty hot meat sandwich. |
| 8. The Siamese cat was extremely sociable. | |

Don't forget that a noun phrase doesn't have to have a determiner. Here are some examples in which the noun phrases (underlined) consist only of adjective(s) and a noun:

26. Cold drinks are delicious.
 27. Talented, creative actors don't always become big stars.
 28. Individual rights are important to preserve.

Proper nouns generally don't have adjectives or determiners in front of them. creative Nicole*, for example, is ungrammatical.

Sentence 7, They laughed, is yet another kind of noun phrase. In this case, the noun phrase consists of just a pronoun, they. (See Unit 7 to remind yourself about pronouns.)

Quick tip 28.3

A noun phrase can consist of just a pronoun, for example he or them.

Notice that you can have a determiner before a noun, for example, the monkey, but you'd never put one before a pronoun: the he*, for example, is ungrammatical. We also do not usually put an adjective before a pronoun: pretty she*, for example, is ungrammatical.

Test yourself 28.7

Underline the noun phrase in each of the sentences below. In this exercise, the noun phrase will always consist of a pronoun. Some sentences may have more than one noun phrase.

UNIT 10: PREPOSITIONAL PHRASES

Lesson 29: The basic structure of prepositional phrases

What do you notice about the following sentences?

1. The toy is on the red table.
2. We live near him.
3. The cute guy walked Mary to the corner.
4. The Jones family traveled around Arizona.

Each of these sentences contains a preposition, which is underlined. Here again are the common prepositions which we listed in Lesson 17:

about	beneath	into	throughout
above	beside	like	till
across	between	near	to
after	beyond	of	toward(s)
against	by	off	under
along	despite	on	until
among	down	onto	up
around	during	out	upon
at	for	over	with before	from	since	within behind	in	through	without below

What follows a preposition? In sentences 1–4, the prepositions are followed by:

5. the red table (determiner + adjective + noun)
6. him (pronoun)
7. the corner (determiner + noun)
8. Arizona (proper noun)

As you may remember from Lesson 28, each of these is a kind of noun phrase. In fact, a preposition is always followed by a noun phrase, called the object of the preposition, and the preposition and its noun phrase form a unit which is called a prepositional phrase.

Quick tip 29.1

A prepositional phrase consists of a preposition plus a noun phrase, for example in the closet.

We don't have to list the different kinds of noun phrases in Quick tip 29.1, because we've already identified them in Lesson 28; we can just refer to noun phrases in general. So it's really useful to have this concept of a noun phrase, and it's a concept that you'll see come up again in other lessons.

UNIT 10: PREPOSITIONAL PHRASES

Here are some more examples of sentences with prepositional phrases (underlined):

9. Let's carry the sofa into the house.
10. That makes sense to us.
11. There was a small lamp on her dresser.
12. Jeanie was living in New York.
13. The boss had no love for his employees.

You can see that each prepositional phrase consists of a preposition and a noun phrase.

Test yourself 29.1

Underline the prepositional phrases in the sentences below. Look for the preposition that begins the prepositional phrase.

Sample: He knew a lot about that subject.

Getting started (answers on p. 125)

1. The fabric was between the boxes.
2. She always eats her lunch with a methodical thoroughness.
3. There was a temple near the hotel.
4. The gift was for a close friend.
5. The congressman is speaking to the press.

6. My son had lunch at McDonald's.
7. She was sitting by the open window.
8. I never heard from him again.
9. The little boy was hiding under the round table.
10. She traveled without her husband.

Test yourself 29.2

Here are the same sentences as in Test yourself 29.1. This time, underline the preposition with a solid line and the noun phrase with a squiggly line within each of the prepositional phrases in the sentences below.

Sample: He knew a lot about that subject.

Getting started (answers on p. 125)

1. The fabric was between the boxes.
2. She always eats her lunch with a methodical thoroughness.
3. There was a temple near the hotel.
4. The gift was for a close friend.
5. The congressman is speaking to the press.

6. My son had lunch at McDonald's.
7. She was sitting by the open window.
8. I never heard from him again.
9. The little boy was hiding under the round table.
10. She traveled without her husband.

To enhance your understanding

Let's compare two sentences with the word up:

14. I looked up your phone number.
15. I walked up the steep hill.

These sentences certainly look very similar. Each has the word up followed by a noun phrase. But in fact, the sentences are different. For one thing, in sentence 14, up can be moved to the other side of the noun phrase without changing its meaning:

16. I looked your phone number up.

In sentence 15, up cannot be moved:

17. *I walked the steep hill up.

Also, in sentence 14, look up is a unit; up feels closely connected to look. In fact, look up can be replaced by a single verb and still have more or less the same meaning, for example, I researched your phone number. In sentence 14, up is part of the verb and is called a verb particle. You may recall that we talked about these verb plus particle combinations in Lesson 11, where we said they were called phrasal verbs. In sentence 15, up is not connected to the verb, so it is not a particle; rather, it is a preposition.

Here are some more examples of sentences with verb particles. Notice that in each of these cases, the verb plus particle can be replaced by a single verb and the particle can be moved.

18a. Her husband carried out the garbage. (Her husband removed the garbage.)

18b. Her husband carried the garbage out.

19a. The criminal covered up the crime. (The criminal hid the crime.)

19b. The criminal covered the crime up.

20a. Don't just brush off her objections. (Don't just dismiss her objections.)

20b. Don't just brush her objections off.

In contrast, here are some more examples of sentences with prepositions. Notice that in each case, the preposition cannot be moved to the other side of its noun phrase.

21a. He looked out the door.

21b. *He looked the door out.

22a. The hiker slowly walked up the hill.

22a. *The hiker slowly walked the hill up.

23a. Take the pot off the stove.

23b. *Take the pot the stove off.

As we discussed above, the preposition is tied to the noun phrase following it, forming a prepositional phrase.

Can a sentence contain more than one prepositional phrase? We started our discussion of prepositional phrases with the following sentences, each of which had only one prepositional phrase (underlined):

24. The toy is on the red table.

25. We live near him.

26. The cute guy walked Mary to the corner.

27. The Jones family traveled around Arizona.

We can expand these sentences, adding another prepositional phrase (underlined) to each:

28. The toy is on the red table in the living room.

29. We live near him in Manhattan.

30. The cute guy from Argentina walked Mary to the corner.

31. The Jones family traveled around Arizona in a rented minivan.

In theory, there's no limit to the number of prepositional phrases that a sentence can have. Take a look at one with quite a few prepositional phrases:

32. They landed the plane in a grassy field near the park by the river in San Francisco.

In reality, however, each sentence we say has a finite length – we have to stop talking at some point!

Test yourself 29.3

Underline the prepositional phrases in the sentences below. A sentence may contain more than one prepositional phrase. Look for the preposition that begins each prepositional phrase.

Sample: She could see the light of the fire in the darkness beyond her tent.

Getting started (answers on p. 125)

1. Andy ran into the field across the road.
2. That first winter had been spent in New Hampshire.
3. She told the story of the night she first arrived at the house.
4. The lady in the red dress bought a bottle of perfume with her credit card.
5. I met my long lost friend at the airport.

UNIT 11: VERB PHRASES

Lesson 30: The basic structure of verb phrases

Remember the sentence, The little boy laughed? As we talked about earlier, The little boy is a noun phrase (see Lesson 28) and laughed is a verb phrase. There are different kinds of verb phrases, and we can begin to discover them by seeing what we can substitute for the verb phrase, laughed, in this sentence. The underlined portions of the sentences below are all verb phrases, and any one of them can replace laughed in the sentence, The little boy laughed.

1. The little boy left.
2. The little boy chased the ball.
3. The little boy chased the red ball.
4. The little boy chased it.
5. The little boy chased Henry.

Of course, there are lots of things that cannot replace laughed in this sentence, for example:

6. *The little boy his extremely.
7. *The little boy near from.
8. *The little boy they.

You're probably not surprised to learn that his extremely, near from, and they are not are not verb phrases.

Have you noticed anything that all the underlined verb phrases in sentences 1–5 have in common? Each verb phrase has a verb. In fact, in sentence 1, the verb phrase has nothing in it but a verb, left. A verb phrase may also have other words, as you can see in sentences 2–5, but the least that every verb phrase has to have is a verb. (See Unit 2 to remind yourself about verbs.)

Quick tip 30.1

Every verb phrase contains a verb, for example laughs, left.

In sentences 1–5, the verb is the first word in the verb phrase and is its most important part.

Test yourself 30.1

Underline the verb phrase in each of the sentences below. In this exercise, the verb phrase will consist of only a verb.

Sample: The family arrived.

Getting started (answers on p. 135)

1. Freddy disappeared.
2. A young woman cried.
3. The soldiers wait.
4. Islept.
5. The little girl smiled.

|--------------------------------|----------------------|
| 6. The music stopped. | 9. Time flies. |
| 7. We agree. | 10. A problem arose. |
| 8. Last night the guests left. | |

If we look at sentences 2–5, we see that a verb phrase can have more in it than just a verb. Let's start with sentence 2, The little boy chased the ball. The verb phrase is:

9. chased the ball (verb + determiner + noun)

You may remember from Lesson 28 that determiner + noun is a kind of noun phrase. Thus, in this sentence, the verb phrase consists of a verb followed by one kind of noun phrase.

Let's look at the verb phrases in sentences 3–5:

10. chased the red ball (verb + determiner + adjective + noun)

11. chased it (verb + pronoun)

12. chased Henry (verb + noun)

You can see that in each case, the verb phrase consists of a verb followed by a noun phrase.

Quick tip 30.2

A verb phrase can consist of a verb plus a noun phrase, for example chased the ball.

Again, we don't have to list the different kinds of noun phrases here, because we've already listed them in Lesson 28; we can just refer to noun phrases in general.

Test yourself 30.2

Underline the verb phrase in each of the sentences below. It may help to first find the verb, which is the first word of these verb phrases. In each sentence here, the verb phrase consists of a verb + noun phrase.

Sample: We welcomed them.

Here are the same sentences as in Test yourself 30.2. This time, in each sentence underline the verb with a solid line and the noun phrase within each verb phrase with a squiggly line.

Sample: We welcomed them.

UNIT 11: VERB PHRASES

Getting started (answers on p. 135)

1. He created a monster.
2. Frank broke the plate.
3. Sherry and I left the house.
4. The detective examined the old broken doorknob.
5. We resent those comments.

6. I read an interesting book.
7. Their younger sister crossed the hall.
8. The Australian swimming team defeated the French.
9. The rich wife bought some insurance.
10. Courtney ordered soup.

In Lesson 9, we talked about the fact that some verbs are action verbs, like run, write, and discover, while others are linking verbs, like be, feel, and become. The verb phrases we've looked at so far have all contained action verbs. Verb phrases with linking verbs are different from verb phrases with action verbs. Let's compare two sentences:

11. John saw the teacher.
12. John is the teacher.

In each sentence, the verb phrase is underlined, and each verb phrase consists of a verb + noun phrase. (Saw and is are the verbs and the teacher is the noun phrase.) But can you see how the verb phrases in sentences 11 and 12 differ? You've probably noticed that in sentence 11, the teacher is receiving the action, but in sentence 12, there is no action (after all, is is a linking verb, not an action verb). So while the structures of sentences 11 and 12 appear to be similar on the surface, the sentences are quite different in meaning.

The following verb phrases with linking verbs are different in structure as well as in meaning from verb phrases with action verbs:

13. John is tall.
14. My sister became anxious.

As you (hopefully!) remember from Lesson 16, tall and anxious are adjectives. So when the verb is a linking verb, it can be followed by an adjective alone. An action verb cannot be followed by just an adjective, as you can see:

15. *John saw tall.
16. *John saw upset.

Quick tip 30.3

A verb phrase can consist of a linking verb plus an adjective, for example is tall.

An adjective which follows a linking verb and is not part of a noun phrase is traditionally called a predicate adjective, as in the example John is tall (sentence 13). In contrast, an adjective which is part of a noun phrase is traditionally called an attributive adjective, as in the example John has a tall sister.

Test yourself 30.4

To enhance your understanding

You may remember, from Lesson 8, that some verbs, for example smell, can be used as either action verbs or linking verbs. For example:

17. That dog smells badly. (Meaning, he does a bad job of smelling things.)

18. That dog smells bad. (Meaning, for example, he needs a bath.)

In sentence 17, smell is an action verb; it refers to the dog doing the action of smelling. In sentence 18, smell is a linking verb; it helps to tell us something about the dog but he's not actually doing anything – he's being something, namely, smelly.

When a verb is used as a linking verb, it can have an adjective, like bad, after it. When it's used as an action verb, it can be followed by an adverb, like badly, but not by an adjective. In Standard American English, good is used only as an adjective. So in Standard American English, it's not considered acceptable to say:

19. You did good.

That's because did is an action verb, and an action verb cannot be completed with just an adjective. So why do we often hear people saying sentences like You did good? What's happening is that people are starting to use good as an adverb, not just as an adjective. Maybe in the future this usage will become more widely accepted, but right now using good as an adverb is not considered Standard American English. (In other words, don't say this at a job interview, although it's fine to say with friends.)

Similarly, people sometimes say, I feel badly, instead of I feel bad, even though they are using feel here as a linking verb, not as an action verb. They know that usually an adverb, like badly, follows a verb, but adverbs only directly follow action verbs, not linking verbs. (When people incorrectly overapply a rule, it's called hypercorrection.)

We can thus explain the difference between I feel good ("I'm OK") and I feel well ("I have the ability to touch effectively"): in the former sentence feel is a linking verb, in the latter it is an action verb.

In Lesson 30, we talked about prepositional phrases. Here are some sentences with their verbs in bold and their prepositional phrases underlined:

20. The Bede family lives around the corner.

21. Please ride to the stable.

22. He headed toward the policeman.

Together, the verb plus prepositional phrase form a verb phrase.

Can a verb phrase have a verb followed by both a noun phrase and a prepositional phrase?

- 23. He walked Mary to the corner.
- 24. The dog chased the man with the umbrella.

In these sentences, the verb phrase consists of a verb followed by a noun phrase and also a prepositional phrase.

Quick tip 30.5

A verb phrase can consist of a verb plus a noun phrase plus a prepositional phrase, for example drove her friend to the mall.

Can we say the following?

- 25. *He walked to the corner Mary.
- 26. *The dog chased with the umbrella the man.

These sentences show us that when a verb is followed by a noun phrase and a prepositional phrase, the noun phrase always has to be before the prepositional phrase.

UNIT 11: VERB PHRASES

To sum up, we list below the kinds of verb phrases we've discussed in this lesson:

verb	(example: laughed)
verb + adjective	(example: was happy) verb + noun phrase	(example: left the room) verb + preposition phrase	(example: walked to the corner)
verb + noun phrase + preposition phrase	(example: walked Rachel to the corner)

While there are more kinds of verb phrases, what we've done here is to show you some basic ones.

UNIT 12: AUXILIARY PHRASES

So far, each verb we've talked about occurs in a verb phrase. This type of verb is called a main verb. Other verbs, called helping verbs or auxiliary verbs, are found in auxiliary phrases. Auxiliary phrases are among the most satisfying to describe. That's because the English auxiliary phrase has a regular pattern, which helps to make it easy to understand. So here's some help with helping verbs.

Lesson 31: The basic structure of auxiliary phrases

What are some sentences with helping (auxiliary) verbs? Here are a few examples, with the helping verb underlined:

1. She should study.
2. She has studied.
3. She is studying.

In these sentences, the main verb is a form of study, and the helping verb is helping to give us additional information that we can't get from just the main verb. (See Unit 2 to remind yourself about main verbs.)

There aren't that many helping verbs; the basic ones are listed in Quick tip 31.1.

Quick tip 31.1

The basic helping verbs of English are:

- a. can may shall will must could might should would
- b. have has had
- c. am are is
was were be been being

Now take another look at sentences 1–3, which have both a helping verb and a main verb. Which comes first? You can see that the main verb always comes after the helping verb.

Quick tip 31.2

If a sentence has both a main verb and a helping verb, the main verb is always last.

Does every sentence of English have a helping verb? Here are examples of sentences that do not have a helping verb. Each only has a main verb, which is underlined.

4. She studies every day.
5. She studied every day.
6. He leaves at 9 in the morning.
7. He left at 9 in the morning.

Test yourself 31.1

Decide whether or not each sentence has a helping verb. Look for the main verb, which is underlined, and see if there's a helping verb before it.

	Helping verb: NO	Helping verb: YES
Sample: He talked about himself. x

| 9. Jan must get that report done. | | |
| 10. The sun rose at 5 A.M. today. | | |

The helping verbs belong to different subgroups, as indicated in Quick tip 31.1. We'll take a closer look at each of the three types of helping verbs in the next few lessons.

Lesson 32: Modals

One kind of helping verb is called a modal. A modal adds information, such as possibility, necessity, or requests, to the verb that follows. The modals are underlined in the sentences below:

1. Ellen can do the job.
2. I will worry about that later.
3. You should rest before the party.
4. Dennis might change that carpeting.

There are nine basic modals, listed below. (They were group (a) of Quick tip 31.1.)

Quick tip 32.1

One kind of helping verb is called a modal. The basic modals of English are:

can	could
may	might shall	should will	would must

Test yourself 32.1

Underline the modal in each of the sentences below.

Sample: William should tell you the story.

Getting started (answers on p. 164)

1. They must delay the invasion.
2. You will find courage in your heart.
3. Mr. Knight might go with you.
4. You should be proud of yourself.
5. Tomorrow we may go to the movies.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. I could dance up a storm.
7. Lauren can name that tune in 10 seconds.
8. Ashley would win that race.
9. He shall travel to the countryside this weekend.
10. Jerry must renew his passport this month.

Test yourself 32.2

Underline the modal and put a squiggly line under the main verb in each of the sentences below.

Sample: She will be happy.

Getting started (answers on p. 164)

1. The curtains might hide the view.
2. Paul could work on the problem.
3. She can leave this afternoon.
4. You must go to the emergency room immediately.
5. The children will enjoy these gifts.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. We should proceed with caution.
7. You may be right.
8. One would think so.
9. Mrs. Randall will give you an answer tomorrow.
10. His father can postpone his retirement until next year.

To enhance your understanding

Here are the modals again:

can	could
may	might
shall	should will	would must

Historically, those modals on the left have been considered present tense forms while those on the right have been considered past tense forms. (For more on tenses, see Lesson 37.) Note that three of the past tense forms end in the consonant d; think of it as a reminder of the past tense suffix -ed, as in the verb stayed.

To further enhance your understanding

Some expressions are similar to modals but consist of more than one word. They are called phrasal modals or periphrastic modals. Here are some examples, underlined in the following sentences:

5. I am able to go.
6. I ought to go.
7. I am going to go.
8. I would like to go.
9. I have to go.
10. I need to go.

Notice that many of the phrasal modals have the same meaning as one of the one-word modals; for example:, am able to = can, ought to = should, am going to = will.

11. I am able to go = I can go.
12. I ought to go = I should go.
13. I am going to go = I will go.

Note also that phrasal verbs end in to, which is followed by the base form of the verb.

Lesson 33: Perfect have

In each of the sentences below, the helping verb is a form of have – either have, has, or had – and is underlined. (These were listed in group (b) of Quick tip 31.1.)

1. She had greeted me happily.
2. They have eaten dinner early today.
3. He has written many articles about the wealthy.

Sentences with the helping verb have are said to be expressed in the perfect aspect, which adds information to the main verb about real-world time. For example, in sentence 2, using have indicates that the action began in the past and is complete.

Quick tip 33.1

One kind of helping verb is the verb have. It has three forms: have, has, and had.

Test yourself 33.1

Underline the have helping verb in each of the sentences below. It may be in any of the three forms of have. In these sentences, it will always be directly before the main verb.

Sample: I have imagined this for years.

Getting started (answers on p. 164)

1. The bridge had collapsed.
2. That cheerful woman has saved the day.
3. My uncles have visited us every summer.
4. Her neighbor has been an attorney for twenty years.
5. Suzie had traveled to Belgium twice before.

6. My friend Sal has bought two suits recently.
7. Your remarks have entertained me enormously.
8. Our teacher had sent us an e-mail yesterday.
9. That thought never has crossed my mind.
10. You and I have played chess numerous times.

Test yourself 33.2

Underline the have helping verb and put a squiggly line under the main verb in each of the sentences below.

Sample: He had annoyed his boss.

Getting started (answers on p. 165)

1. Joan and Sam have worked for hours.
2. Their mother has spoken of you often.
3. The prime minister had written to him.
4. Your daughter has grown a lot taller.
5. She has seen her friends twice since last Sunday.

| 6. Our dogs have made a mess of the living room. | 9. We have thought about your suggestion seriously. |
| 7. You had warned me not to heed his advice. | |
| 8. The chef has prepared this dish perfectly. | 10. The actors had rehearsed for about an hour. |

The verb have is not used only as a helping verb in English. It can also be the main verb in a sentence. Here are some examples with have used as the main verb. Notice that when have is being used as the main verb, it refers to the notion of possession or ownership.

4. I have a comfortable bed.
5. She has a beautiful home.
6. That family had a lot of problems.

Quick tip 33.2

Have can be used as a helping verb or as a main verb. When have is used as the main verb, it refers to the idea of possession. When have is used as the helping verb, it is always followed by another verb.

Test yourself 33.3

Decide if the forms of have in the following sentences are being used as helping verbs or as main verbs.

	Helping verb	Main verb
Sample: Jack had a good time. x
Getting started (answers on p. 165)
1. Jack has experienced a good time.
2. He has seen her often.
3. You have a lot of DVDs.
4. She had tacos for dinner.
5. Your professor has the answer to your question.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Grandpa has slept on the couch often.
7. Aisha had trouble with her car this morning.
8. My aunt has a treadmill in her basement.
9. Mrs. Stein had called the paramedics.
10. They have donated that coat to charity.

You may have noticed that sometimes there are sentences with two occurrences of have. Here are some examples.

7. Jack has had a bad time.
8. The mayor had had a close election.
9. We have had a delicious dinner.

How can we account for this? The first occurrence of have is a helping verb; the second occurrence of have is the main verb (and refers to possession). That is, just as any other main verb can use have as a helping verb, the main verb have can also use have as a helping verb. That results in two forms of have in the same sentence.

Lesson 34: Progressive be

In each of the sentences below, the helping verb is a form of the verb be and is underlined.

1. She is leaving on the train.
2. I was thinking about his behavior.
3. They were managing the restaurant.

(These were listed in group (c) of Quick tip 31.1.) In addition to the forms is, was, and were, additional forms of be are am, are, be, been, and being.

Sentences with the helping verb be are said to be expressed in the progressive or continuous aspect, which usually indicates that the action takes place over a period of time.

Quick tip 34.1

One kind of helping verb is be. It has the following forms: am, is, are, was, were, be, been, and being.

Test yourself 34.1

Underline the form of the be helping verb in each of the sentences below.

Sample: He was exercising regularly.

Getting started (answers on p. 165)

1. The reporter was writing her story.
2. He is controlling his temper.
3. You are learning about syntax.
4. They were watching a movie last Sunday.
5. I am doing a lot of things right now.

6. The politicians are campaigning in full force.
7. The football teams were finishing the season.
8. Catherine is learning to speak French.
9. Those actors were rehearsing.
10. I was cleaning my closet yesterday.

Test yourself 34.2

Underline the be helping verb and put a squiggly line under the main verb in each of the sentences below.

Sample: He is greeting his boss.

Getting started (answers on p. 165)

1. I was talking to Harry.
2. Irving and Annie are studying Latin.
3. He is testing her loyalty.
4. I am taking a walk.
5. You were reading for hours.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The train is arriving.
7. The wrestlers are getting ready to compete.
8. The manager was closing the store.
9. I am organizing a luncheon for him.
10. The children were playing peacefully.

Lesson 34: Progressive be

The verb be is not used only as a helping verb in English. It can also be the main verb in a sentence, in which case it's a linking verb. (This was discussed in Lesson 9.) As a reminder, here are some sentences with be used as the main verb:

4. I am happy.
5. She was an actress.
6. Those Broadway shows are great.

Quick tip 34.2

Be and its forms can be used as a helping verb or as a main verb. When be is used as the helping verb, it is always followed by another verb.

Test yourself 34.3

Decide if the forms of be in the following sentences are being used as helping verbs or as main verbs.

	Helping verb	Main verb
Sample: Joan is a genius. x
Getting started (answers on p. 165)
1. Sam is looking at the mail.
2. That concept was difficult.
3. You are helping her a lot.
4. I am a doctor.
5. They were watching TV.
More practice (answers on the website)
6. She was writing her term paper.
7. David is a famous opera singer.
8. You are joking, right?
9. His employees are happy about it.
10. Jackie and Richard were friends.

You may have noticed that sometimes there are sentences with two occurrences of be. Here are some examples:

7. Andrew is being a nuisance.
8. My friends were being courageous.
9. They are being clowns.

How can we account for this? The first occurrence of be is a helping verb; the second occurrence of be is the main verb. That is, just as any other main verb can use be as a helping verb, the main verb be can also use be as a helping verb. That results in two forms of be in the same sentence.

Lesson 35: Combining auxiliary verbs

All the sentences with helping (auxiliary) verbs that we've looked at so far have had only one helping verb. It's possible, however, for a sentence to have more than one helping verb. Here are some examples of sentences with two helping verbs; the helping verbs are underlined. (Remember that there are three kinds of helping verbs: (a) modals (e.g. should, can, might), (b) have, and (c) be. See Lessons 32–34.)

1. She should have studied. (modal + have)
2. She may be studying. (modal + be)
3. She has been studying. (have + be)

When a sentence has two helping verbs, which helping verb is first? If a sentence has a modal, that will always be the first helping verb, as you can see in sentences 1 and 2. If a sentence has both have and be as helping verbs, have will always be first, as you can see in sentence 3.

Can you think of a sentence with three helping verbs? Sentences 4 and 5 have three helping verbs (underlined):

4. She should have been studying.
5. Mary might have been looking at him.

If there are three helping verbs, they are always in the following order: modal + have + be, as you can see from sentences 4 and 5. And if there are only two helping verbs, they're still in this relative order, with modal first, and have before be.

Quick tip 35.1

A sentence can have zero, one, or more than one helping verb. If there is more than one, they will always be in the following relative order: modal + have + be.

Test yourself 35.1

For each sentence below, underline the main verb. Then decide if the sentence has zero, one, two, or three helping verbs before the main verb.

Sample: They may rent a car at the terminal. 1

Getting started (answers on p. 165)

1. She was focusing on the mirror.
2. Andy should have been enjoying his new career.
3. Mrs. Packard's life changed at that point.
4. You can have two scoops of ice cream.
5. I might have committed a serious error.

Test yourself 35.3

Underline each helping verb in the sentences below. A sentence will have anywhere from zero to three helping verbs.

Sample: He and Bill shook hands. (No helping verb.)

Getting started (answers on p. 166)

1. I had been writing to him often.
2. Their mother has spoken of you a lot.
3. Sam will recognize it immediately.

Lesson 36: The suffixes of auxiliary verbs

Each helping verb is actually a two-part package. There's the helping verb itself, and then there's the effect that the helping verb has on the verb that follows it.

Look at the sentences below. In each of them, the helping verb is a form of progressive be (underlined). What effect does progressive be have on the verb that follows it?

1. The children were working hard.
2. I am considering a new job offer.
3. Nothing was limiting his development.
4. Many new advances are emerging.
5. Sam is watching his favorite TV show.

You can see that the verb after the form of be always has -ing added to its base. This -ing form of the verb is referred to as the present participle in traditional grammar.

Quick tip 36.1

When the helping verb is progressive be, the next verb always has -ing added to its base form. Example: is sleeping. The -ing verb form is called the present participle.

Test yourself 36.1

Each of the following sentences has a form of the helping verb be. Underline the be verb and the -ing ending of the following verb.

Sample: Maggie is sleeping now.

Getting started (answers on p. 166)

1. She is leaving on the ten o'clock train.
2. The curtains were masking the view.
3. I was wondering about his behavior.
4. Paul is leaning on his wife's chair.
5. They are sounding rather defensive.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. We were attending a graduation ceremony last week.
7. Jim's parents were watching a movie.
8. You are trying too hard.
9. I am dreaming of a gentle snowfall.
10. The President was addressing the nation yesterday.

In each of the following sentences, the helping verb is a form of have (underlined). What effect does have have on the verb that follows it? (This is a little trickier than the pattern with be.)

6. She had greeted me happily.
7. They have eaten dinner early today.
8. That had interested the reporter.
9. Sarah had managed to pry apart the shells.

UNIT 12: AUXILIARY PHRASES

10. Carla and Raphael have written many books together.
11. He and Bill had shaken hands.

The verb following have most frequently has the suffix -en or -ed added to it. The form of the verb following the helping verb have is traditionally called the past participle.

Quick tip 36.2

When have is the helping verb, the next verb typically has -ed or -en added to its base form. Examples: has eaten, have watched. The verb form following the helping verb have is called the past participle.

Test yourself 36.2

Each of the following sentences has a form of the helping verb have. Underline the have and the -ed or -en ending of the following verb.

Sample: You had managed the situation very well.

Getting started (answers on p. 166)

1. The women had spoken to each other recently.
2. Unfortunately, the heroine had married the villain.
3. Andy and George have enjoyed themselves enormously.
4. My student has written an interesting essay on technology.
5. The hockey game has ended in a tie.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The local theater has provided much entertainment over the years.
7. I have seen you somewhere before.
8. Her brother has broken the vase to pieces.
9. They have lied too many times.
10. Mona's boyfriend has surprised her with a wedding proposal.

The -ed and -en suffixes are the most common endings for past participles. However, for historical reasons, there are actually several ways to form past participles. Note the following patterns of some typical verbs:

Verb base	Perfect	Past participle
be	have been	been
see	have seen	seen
give	have given	given
arrange	have arranged	arranged
walk	have walked	walked
play	have played	played

Another way to form past participles is by changing a vowel of the verb base, sometimes also adding the suffix -en. Some examples are:

Verb base	Perfect	Past participle
begin	have begun	begun
sing	have sung	sung
speak	have spoken	spoken
weave	have woven	woven

Lesson 36: The suffixes of auxiliary verbs

Sometimes no change at all is made to the verb:

Verb base	Perfect	Past participle
hit	have hit	hit
come	have come	come

There is no magic or hard and fast rule to determine what the past participle of a particular verb is. We simply have to memorize it when we learn English.

In each of the following sentences, the helping verb is a modal (underlined). What effect does a modal have on the verb that follows it?

12. The piano salesman should consider his actions.
13. He will recognize it immediately.
14. Sam could be a star quarterback.
15. The major may speak to you later.

Quick tip 36.3

When the helping verb is a modal, the next verb is always in its base form. Example: can study.

Test yourself 36.3

Each of the following sentences has a modal helping verb. Underline the modal and put a squiggly line under the verb following it, which will be in its base form.

Sample: He should oppose their actions.

Getting started (answers on p. 166)

1. Richard will believe the truth.
2. The waiter might bring it.
3. They may be home late.
4. We shall overcome this obstacle.
5. I would do it in an instant.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. The mail should arrive by noon.
7. Michael can build anything.
8. The waiters must wash their hands often.
9. On a clear day, you could see for miles.
10. The train will make a stop in Atlanta.

What happens to the following verb if there is more than one helping verb in a sentence? Is the pattern the same when a helping verb is followed by another helping verb, rather than the main verb? The patterns we have talked about are the same, whether there is one helping verb or more than one helping verb in a sentence. You can see this in the following sentences:

16. They have been seeing the doctor regularly.
17. You have been observing the situation closely.

Since have (in bold) is a helping verb in these sentences, the next verb, be, gets the -en ending (also in bold). And since be (underlined) is also a helping verb, the verb after be gets the -ing ending (also underlined).

We can also see consistent patterns in the following two sentences:

18. They should have seen the doctor regularly.

19. You might be observing the situation closely.

In sentence 18 the modal (in bold) causes the next verb, have, to be in its base form. The have helping verb then affects the form of the next verb, the main verb see, which appears in its past participle form, seen. Similarly, in sentence 19 the modal, might, causes the next verb, be, to be in its base form. Then the be affects the form of the next verb, the main verb observe, which appears in its present participle form, observing.

What happens if a sentence has all three kinds of helping verbs? The pattern still remains the same, as you can see in the next set of examples:

20. They should have be en seeing the doctor regularly.

21. You might have been observing the situation more closely.

The modal, which is the first helping verb (in bold), causes have to be in its base form. The have helping verb (underlined) causes the next verb, be, to appear in its past participle form, that is, with the -en suffix (also underlined), and be (with a squiggly line) causes the next verb, the main verb, to be in its present participle form, that is, ending in -ing (also with a squiggly line).

So the overall pattern is completely consistent, whether a sentence has one, two, or three helping verbs.

As we've seen, when progressive be is the helping verb, the next verb always has -ing added to it. But sometimes verbs ending in the -ing suffix have a different use, as we can see in these next sentences:

22. Skiing energizes me.

23. I love cooking.

In these sentences, the -ing word does not follow the helping verb be. Instead, the -ing ending changes the verb into a noun. In fact, notice that the -ing word can be replaced with a typical noun in these sentences, for example: Sugar energizes me, I love Mary. A noun that consists of a verb and the suffix -ing is called a gerund.

Quick tip 36.4

A noun that consists of a verb and the suffix -ing is called a gerund. Example: Entertain-ing is fun.

Here are some more examples of sentences with gerunds:

24. Reading is one of life's pleasures.

25. Thinking can be hard work!

26. The criminal admitted lying.

27. They stopped worrying about it.

Test yourself 36.4

Decide if each underlined word ending in -ing in the following sentences is being used as a verb, part of the progressive be "package," or as a noun, that is, as a gerund. To help you decide, see whether or not the -ing word follows the helping verb be.

Here is a summary of the three helping verbs we've discussed in this lesson and the form of the verb that follows each:

Helping verb	Following verb
modal	base form
perfect have	past participle form (typically ending in -ed or -en) progressive be :	present participle form (always ending in -ing)

Two additional helping verbs will be discussed in Lessons 52 and 53.

Lesson 37: Tense

The verb of a sentence gives information about tense. Speakers of English generally are aware that, for example, the verb studies is a present tense form while the verb studied is a past tense form.

Test yourself 37.1

For each verb below, decide if it is in its present tense or past tense form.

It's important to understand that grammatical tense and real world time are not necessarily the same. Take a look at the following sentences:

1. She studied yesterday.
2. She was studying yesterday.

In sentences 1 and 2, the tense of the underlined verbs, as seen in their forms, is past; the time that is being talked about is also past. So in these cases tense and time are the same.

Now consider the following sentences:

3. I am going to France next summer.
4. She has bought the books for the course.

In sentences 3 and 4, the grammatical tense of the underlined verbs is present. (If these verbs were past tense forms, they would be was and had, respectively). However, the real-life or actual time that sentence 3 is talking about is in the future; the actual time that sentence 4 is talking about is in the past. So in sentences 3 and 4 we can see that grammatical tense and real-life time are not always the same.

For the rest of this lesson, we'll be focusing on the tense (grammatical form) and not the real-life time of English verbs.

Quick tip 37.1

Time refers to a point in real life at which something occurs. Tense refers to the grammatical form of a verb.

In a simple sentence, tense information is carried by only one verb. If a sentence has helping verbs as well as a main verb, which verb shows tense? In each of the sentences below, the verb that carries the tense information is underlined.

5. John studies.
6. John studied.
7. John has studied.
8. John had studied.
9. John is studying.
10. John was studying.
11. John has been studying.
12. John had been studying.

You can see that in each sentence it is the very first verb that carries the tense information, regardless of whether it's a helping verb or the main verb.

You will notice that we have not included in our list of sentences in 5 through 12 examples of sentences whose first verb is a modal. (Recall from Lesson 34 that modals always come first in sentences with more than one verb.) That is because in general, modals do not carry clear tense information. Look at the following examples:

13. I might do it right now / today.
14. I might do it tomorrow.
15. I might have done it yesterday.

As you can see, the form of the modal is the same (might), regardless of whether it refers to time in the present (sentence 13), time in the future (sentence 14), or time in the past (sentence 15). We will consider modals to be tenseless.

Quick tip 37.2

Tense information is always indicated by the first verb in the sentence, excluding modals.

Traditionally, sentences have been grouped into different types, according to the tense of the verb. Let's compare the following two sentences:

16. John studies every day.
17. John studied every day.

You can see that the only difference between sentence 16 and sentence 17 is that in 16, study is in its present tense form and in 17 study is in its past tense form. On this basis, sentence 16 has present tense (or simple present tense), while sentence 17 has past tense (or simple past tense).

Here are some more examples, with the verbs underlined:

18. Ira sighed in relief. (past)
19. Alice sees her often. (present)
20. He laughed hysterically. (past)
21. I often forget the answer. (present)

Quick tip 37.3

Sentences with no helping verb are in either the present or past tense, depending on the form of the verb.

Almost all verbs, like the verbs in sentences 18 and 20, form their past tense by adding the suffix -ed. These verbs are called regular verbs. Some verbs, however, do not follow this pattern. These verbs are called irregular verbs. Some examples of irregular verbs are: see (past tense saw), write (past tense wrote), and hit (past tense hit).

Test yourself 37.2

Decide if each sentence is in the present or past tense. You'll need to find the verb to make this decision.

Sample: Her daughter giggled happily. past

Getting started (answers on p. 167)

1. They deliver furniture on Tuesdays.
2. The senator supports that bill.
3. I voted for him.
4. I ate a sandwich for lunch.
5. The shortstop hit a home run.

6. Michigan State beat Ohio State.
7. Our niece studies anthropology.
8. The weather is humid today.
9. The repairman arrived at noon.
10. My daughter came for a visit.

The next two sentences have future tense (or simple future tense): they have the modal helping verb will, followed by the base of the main verb.

22. John will study tomorrow.
23. Jessica will visit her soon.

Quick tip 37.4

Sentences with will followed by the main verb are in the future tense.

The future tense can also be expressed with the modal helping verb shall: e.g. John shall study tomorrow. Shall has restricted usage in American English: generally, it's used only in formal speech styles. Consequently, we'll ignore shall in our discussion here.

Test yourself 37.3

Decide if each sentence below is in the present, past, or future tense.

Sample: Those Halloween decorations will look scary. future

Getting started (answers on p. 167)

1. He sleeps late on weekends.
2. Zach was proud of his son.
3. Bethany will get married soon.

Lesson 37: Tense

- 4. The show began promptly at 8 P.M.
- 5. My sister will run in the New York City marathon.

More practice (answers on the website)

- 6. The coffee tasted bitter.
- 7. I study in England every summer.
- 8. My younger brother beat me at chess.
- 9. Stu gets up at 7 A.M. every morning.
- 10. We will hold a family reunion in July.

As we saw above (in sentences 4, 11, and 12), sentences with the have helping verb also change in form to indicate tense:

- 24. I have bought the books.
- 25. I had bought the books.

The difference between the two sentences is that sentence 24 is in the present tense, while sentence 25 is in the past tense. Notice that it is only the form of have that changes to indicate the tense information. The verb after have is always in its past participle form, which does not change to indicate tense. Although sentences with the have helping verb are in the perfect aspect, when we talk about a sentence with both tense and aspect, we just use the term “tense.” So therefore sentence 24 is in the present perfect tense while sentence 25 is in the past perfect tense.

Quick tip 37.5

If a sentence has a form of have as a helping verb, it will have the word perfect as part of the name of its tense.

Quick tip 37.6

The present tense forms of have are have and has. The past tense form of have is had.

Test yourself 37.4

Decide if each sentence is in the present perfect or past perfect tense. Use the form of have to help you make your decision.

Sample: I had believed every word of that broadcast. past perfect

Getting started (answers on p. 167)

- 1. She had wanted to do everything her way.
- 2. Martha has known about the surprise.
- 3. Samantha had decided to do that.
- 4. I have written to him about that issue.
- 5. You have been a good friend.

UNIT 12: AUXILIARY PHRASES

- 6. They have purchased a new home.
- 7. On our trip, we had converted $200 to euros.
- 8. Andy has promised to tell the truth.
- 9. The detective had found an important witness.
- 10. The Democrats have won the presidency.

What do you think is the tense of the following sentences?

- 26. John will have studied by then.
- 27. It will have been an easy test.

Since these sentences have both will and a form of have as helping verbs, they are in the future perfect tense.

Quick tip 37.7

If a sentence has will as a helping verb, it will have the word future as part of the name of its tense.

Test yourself 37.5

Decide if each sentence below is in the present perfect, past perfect, or future perfect tense. Look at the form of have and for the presence or absence of will to help you.

Sample: Our friends have dropped by. present perfect

Getting started (answers on p. 167)

- 1. They have finished the assignment.
- 2. The alarm clock will have gone off by then.
- 3. Linda had locked the door.
- 4. My friend John has been a great help to me.
- 5. By then, I will have finished studying.

More practice (answers on the website)

- 6. Frank had appeared in a movie once.
- 7. You have encouraged me many times.
- 8. She has written a letter to her sister.
- 9. There had been a flood of inquiries.
- 10. You will have left a great legacy to your children.

Last, we come to sentences with a form of be as a helping verb. These also change in form to indicate tense:

28. I am buying the book.
29. I was buying the book.

The difference between the two sentences is that sentence 28 is in the present tense, while sentence 29 is in the past tense. Notice that the verb after be is in its present participle form (that is, its -ing form), which does not change to indicate tense. Remember that although sentences with the be helping verb are in the progressive aspect, when we talk about a sentence with both tense and aspect, we just use the term “tense.” So therefore sentence 28 is in the present progressive tense while sentence 29 is in the past progressive tense.

As you might expect, the following sentences are in the future progressive tense:

30. I will be leaving at three o'clock.
31. Harry will be running the marathon.

You can see that they have both will and be as helping verbs.

Quick tip 37.8

If a sentence has a form of be as a helping verb, it will have the word progressive as part of the name of its tense.

Quick tip 37.9

The present tense forms of be are am, is, and are. The past tense forms of be are was and were.

Test yourself 37.6

Decide if each sentence below is in the present progressive, past progressive, or future progressive tense. Look at the form of be and for the presence or absence of will to help you.

Sample: He was racing down the steps of the library. past progressive

6. They were buying stamps at the post office.
7. Jackie will be starting a new business.
8. You surely are kidding.
9. The mechanic was washing his car.
10. We will be celebrating for hours.

UNIT 12: AUXILIARY PHRASES

Since sentences can have more than one helping verb (see Lesson 35), their tenses can have combinations of the words present, past, future, perfect, and progressive in their names. Here are examples of each of the possible tenses:

32. Mary speaks to everyone. (present)
33. Mary spoke to everyone. (past)
34. Mary will speak to everyone. (future)
35. Mary has spoken to everyone. (present perfect)
36. Mary had spoken to everyone. (past perfect)
37. Mary will have spoken to everyone. (future perfect)
38. Mary is speaking to everyone. (present progressive)
39. Mary was speaking to everyone. (past progressive)
40. Mary will be speaking to everyone. (future progressive)
41. Mary has been speaking to everyone. (present perfect progressive)
42. Mary had been speaking to everyone. (past perfect progressive)
43. Mary will have been speaking to everyone. (future perfect progressive)

To sum up:

- (a) A sentence with will always has the word future in its tense name.
- (b) A sentence with a have helping verb always has the word perfect in its tense name.
- (c) A sentence with a be helping verb followed by a verb in its -ing form always has the word progressive in its tense name.
- (d) For sentences without will, look at the form of the first helping verb, if there is one, or of the main verb, if there's no helping verb, to decide if the tense is present or past.

UNIT 13: SUBJECTS AND OBJECTS

Sentences may contain several noun phrases. These noun phrases can have different jobs, or functions, within the sentence. Take a look at the following sentence:

On Valentine's Day, my brother bought a bouquet of flowers for his wife.

The underlined noun phrases are doing different things: my brother is doing the action, a bouquet of flowers is receiving the action, and his wife is receiving the flowers. In the lessons of this unit, we discuss in detail these grammatical functions (or grammatical relations).

Lesson 38: Subjects

We can identify the subject of a sentence with an action verb (see Lesson 9) by answering the question: “Who is doing the action?” For example, in the sentence Confucius spoke many words of wisdom, the action is speaking. Who is, or was, doing the speaking? Confucius. Confucius is therefore the subject of the sentence. The subjects are underlined in the following examples:

1. John baked a cake.
2. You are going to grin and bear it.
3. Just then, the children walked in.
4. He delivered a small package.
5. Mr. Bucknose, the carpenter, sleeps in the spare room.
6. Wearily, the group trudged onward.
7. I usually take a nap in the afternoon.

Generally, the subject is at or near the beginning of the sentence. More specifically, the subject is the first noun phrase (see Lesson 28) in the sentence.

Quick tip 38.1

If the main verb of the sentence is an action verb, the subject of the sentence is the doer of the action and generally comes before the verb. It can be found by answering the question: “Who or what is doing the action?”

Test yourself 38.1

Underline the subject in each of the sentences below. In these sentences, it will always be the doer of the action and will be the first noun phrase in the sentence.

Sample: Jeanette demanded an answer to her question.

Getting started (answers on p. 189)

1. The servant accompanied His Lordship.
2. Jean participated in the Tour de France.
3. Such families have often preferred to travel in style.
4. They could do nothing except run.

7. Your uncle invited me to accompany him on his business trip.
8. The Yankees won the World Series many times.
9. Macy’s is holding a huge sale next Sunday.
10. The TV repairman has just arrived.

The subject is underlined in the following sentences:

8. John is tall.
9. That church is impressive.

Lesson 38: Subjects

10. Both brothers became architects.

11. Earlier, she had felt dizzy.

In these sentences, the subject is not performing an action – the verb is not an action verb. Rather, the verb is a linking verb (see Lesson 9). When the verb in the sentence is a linking verb, the subject can be found by asking the question: “Who or what is this sentence about?” In these cases, the subject is found at or near the beginning of the sentence, before the verb.

Quick tip 38.2

If the main verb of the sentence is a linking verb, the subject is who or what the sentence is about; the subject is found before the verb.

Test yourself 38.2

Underline the subject in each of the sentences below. In these sentences, it will always be who or what the sentence is about and will be the first noun phrase in the sentence.

Sample: The professor was imprisoned for his beliefs.

Getting started (answers on p. 189)

The subject is not always right at the beginning of the sentence:

12. In the afternoon, I usually take a nap.

13. In truth, Don Diego had never really had a career.

UNIT 13: SUBJECTS AND OBJECTS

14. That day, his timing was perfect.

15. When in the country, Jack was up before dawn.

In each of these sentences, the subject is preceded by an adverb (see Lesson 27) or adverbial clause, a group of words typically giving information about time, place, or manner.

Test yourself 38.4

Underline the subject in each of the sentences below. The subject will not necessarily be the first noun phrase in the sentence.

Sample: By late afternoon, he is usually exhausted.

Getting started (answers on p. 189)

1. After that, their neighbor came more often to help them.
2. Fortunately, that university program is accredited.
3. In the morning, I'm planting those flowers.

10. Exciting times are much more memorable than boring ones.

Lesson 39: Direct objects

As we saw in Lesson 38, a noun phrase can function as the subject of a sentence. A noun phrase can also have other functions. For example, a noun phrase may be acted upon by the subject and follow the verb. These noun phrases are called direct objects. The direct objects in the sentences below are underlined:

1. John baked a cake.
2. Leah had visualized a simple room.
3. She is buying a small studio apartment.
4. My niece rented a movie last night.

How can you tell which noun phrase in a sentence functions as the direct object? In general, the direct object is the answer to the questions: “Who or what is being acted upon? Who or what is receiving the action?” Thus, for example, in the sentence My niece rented a movie last night, the direct object is a movie, since a movie is what is being acted upon (being rented). Typically, direct objects occur immediately after the verb. (We discuss a different pattern in Lesson 40.)

Quick tip 39.1

The direct object of a sentence is receiving the action. It can usually be found by answering the question: “Who or what is being acted upon or receiving the action?” The direct object typically occurs immediately after the verb.

Test yourself 39.1

Underline the direct object in each of the sentences below. Be sure to ask yourself who or what is being acted upon or receiving the action.

Sample: I saw a statue in the museum.

Getting started (answers on p. 189)

6. Most people greeted us warmly at the reception.
7. I bought two bottles of Pepsi.
8. Actors must memorize their lines.
9. Last week, Jack renewed his passport.
10. Where did you get that sweater?

Not all sentences have direct objects. Here are examples of sentences with action verbs that do not have direct objects.

UNIT 13: SUBJECTS AND OBJECTS

- 5. My friend laughed loudly.
- 6. Mr. Thomas slept well.
- 7. You're always worrying.

You may remember, from Lesson 10, that there are transitive and intransitive verbs. Transitive verbs, like bake or rent, act on something or someone and so they have direct objects. Intransitive verbs, like laugh, sleep, and worry, aren't acting upon something or someone and so don't have direct objects.

What about these next sentences?

- 8. My friend stopped at the grocery store.
- 9. Mr. Thomas slept well during the night.
- 10. You're always worrying about something.

As you can see, these sentences have prepositional phrases, which are underlined (Lesson 29). A prepositional phrase is not a direct object. For example, at the grocery store in sentence 8 and during the night in sentence 9 are not being acted upon.

To sum up, only transitive action verbs have direct objects, and prepositional phrases are not direct objects.

Test yourself 39.2

Decide whether or not each sentence below has a direct object.

	Direct object?	Yes	No
Sample: Her best friend entered the room first.		x

Getting started (answers on p. 190)

7. They watch football on Sunday nights.
8. Jill and Sam have left with a friend.
9. Can you pass the butter, please?
10. She wants a big scoop of chocolate ice cream.

What about this next sentence?

- 11. She is a doctor.

Is a doctor receiving the action of is? Kind of a strange question, isn't it? That's because is is not an action verb; it's a linking verb (see Lesson 9). Sentences with linking verbs don't have direct objects, since there is no action happening in the sentence. In each sentence below, the linking verb is italicized. The underlined portion of each sentence is not a direct object, since it's not being acted upon. Instead, it's called the verb complement.

Lesson 39: Direct objects

12. My teacher resembles Tom Cruise.
13. That dinner was delicious.
14. Her husband became a lawyer.

Test yourself 39.3

Decide if the underlined phrase in each sentence below is a direct object or a verb complement. To make this decision, you can: (1)ask yourself if something or someone is being acted upon, and/or (2)decide if the verb is an action or linking verb.

Sample: Bill became a member of the President's cabinet. verb complement

Lesson 40: Indirect objects

Sometimes a noun phrase is the answer to the question: “Who or what is receiving the direct object?” This noun phrase is called the indirect object. The indirect objects are underlined in the sentences below.

1. Mary gave the information to Robert.
2. She told the truth to her granddaughter.
3. They bought a car for their teenage daughter.
4. The accountant is giving a present to her husband.

So in sentence 4, for instance, the noun phrase a present is the direct object and the noun phrase her husband is the indirect object, since her husband is receiving the present, the direct object.

Quick tip 40.1

The indirect object of a sentence can be found by answering the question: “Who or what is receiving the direct object?”

You can see that sentences that have indirect objects must also have direct objects, since indirect objects receive direct objects. The opposite is not true: sentences with direct objects don’t necessarily have indirect objects.

A direct object and an indirect object each follows the verb and is referred to by the term object. The term object can also refer to objects of a preposition, that is, noun phrases that follow prepositions. (See Lesson 29.)

Test yourself 40.1

Underline the indirect object in each of the sentences below.

Sample: Jane baked the cake for Grant.

Getting started (answers on p. 190)

1. Holly left the plate for Luke.
2. She taught the principles to the class.
3. Big Bird is telling the story to all the children.
4. His father had bought the boat for Jonathan.
5. You will show the money to me.

7. They bid farewell to their house guests.
8. The teenage idol is throwing a party for his fans.
9. I want to wish good luck to you.
10. My dad baked a pie for us.

Indirect objects are introduced by the preposition to or for. Some verbs, such as tell and show, use to to introduce an indirect object, while some verbs, such as buy and leave, use for.

UNIT 13: SUBJECTS AND OBJECTS

To and for do not function only to introduce indirect objects; often, to and for have other functions. Take a look at these next sentences and notice the differences between them:

5. Mary gave the baby to Robert.
6. Mary carried the baby to the corner.

In both sentences, Mary is the subject, the doer of the action, and the baby is the direct object, the receiver of the action. In sentence 5, Robert is receiving the baby, the direct object, so Robert is the indirect object. However, in sentence 6 the corner is not receiving the baby and so it's not the indirect object. (It's the object of the preposition to; see Lesson 29.)

Here's a similar pair of sentences:

7. He got a gift for his wife.
8. He got a gift for his birthday.

In both sentences, He is the subject, the doer of the action, and a gift is the direct object, the receiver of the action. In sentence 7, his wife is receiving a gift, the direct object, so his wife is the indirect object. However, in sentence 8 his birthday is not receiving a gift, so it's not the indirect object. (It's the object of the preposition for.)

Test yourself 40.2

For each of the sentences below, indicate whether or not to and for are being used to introduce an indirect object. Ask yourself if the noun phrase following to or for is receiving the direct object.

	Introducing an indirect object?
	Yes	No
Sample: I inspected the car for dents. x
Getting started (answers on p. 190)
1. John worked that job for fifty years.
2. The professor is showing the problem to the student.
3. His wife and child brought fruit to him at the hospital.
4. Tom has left the company for another job.

7. We will remember this general for his heroism.
8. I have forwarded your message to your mother.
9. He took his friend to the theater.
10. The Black family took a ride to the countryside.

Here are sentences 1–4 again, but this time with a “partner” sentence:

- 9a. Mary gave the information to Robert.
- 9b. Mary gave Robert the information.

Lesson 40: Indirect objects

- 10a. She told the truth to her granddaughter.
 10b. She told her granddaughter the truth.
 11a. They bought a car for their teenage daughter.
 11b. They bought their teenage daughter a car.
 12a. The accountant is giving a present to him.
 12b. The accountant is giving him a present.

You can see that in the second sentence of each pair, the indirect object has moved so that it comes before the direct object, rather than after it. English gives us two choices for the position of indirect objects: (a) the indirect object can occur after the direct object (which follows the verb), with to or for introducing it, or (b) the indirect object can occur before the direct object (and after the verb), without to or for.

Quick tip 40.2

An indirect object can occur: (a) after the direct object (which follows the verb), with to or for introducing it, or (b) before the direct object (and after the verb), without to or for. For example: Joan gave a present to Bill or Joan gave Bill a present. (Bill is the indirect object in both sentences.)

Quick tip 40.3

To help you decide if a sentence has an indirect object, see if the sentence can be changed from a pattern like The boys left a note for their teacher to a sentence with a pattern like The boys left their teacher a note, or vice versa.

Note that when the direct object is a pronoun, the two patterns are not both possible, as you can see in these next sentence pairs:

- 13a. Her best friend bought it for her family.
 13b. *Her best friend bought her family it.
 14a. Lucy sold them to her neighbor.
 14b. *Lucy sold her neighbor them.

That is, when the direct object is a pronoun, it must come before the indirect object.

Quick tip 40.4

If the direct object is a pronoun, it must come before the indirect object. Example: My sister sent it to her friend, My sister sent her friend it*.

Test yourself 40.3

Each sentence below contains an indirect object, which is underlined. Change each sentence to the other pattern, by moving the indirect object and either deleting or adding to or for.

Lesson 41: The functions of pronouns

Now that we've talked about subjects and objects in some detail, it's a good idea for us to reexamine subject and object pronouns, which we first discussed in Lesson 21.

Take a look at the noun phrase the teacher in each of the sentences below.

1. The teacher went home early today.
(The teacher is the subject.)
2. The students liked the teacher very much.
(The teacher is the direct object.)
3. The parents gave the questionnaire to the teacher.
(The teacher is the indirect object.)

Notice that the teacher has the same form whether it's functioning as the subject, the direct object, or the indirect object in a sentence. This is true for all nouns in English: they don't change form when they change function.

In contrast, there are subject pronouns and object pronouns (see Lesson 21). Subject pronouns are used when a pronoun is functioning as the subject of a sentence (see Lesson 38). The subject pronoun is underlined in the following sentences:

4. I read the newspaper every day.
5. She is happy.
6. We love potato chips.

Object pronouns are used in all other contexts. The three major uses for object pronouns are: direct object (Lesson 39), indirect object (Lesson 40), and object of a preposition (Lesson 29). The object pronouns are underlined in the following sentences:

7. My sister congratulated me on my birthday. (direct object)
8. The director sent her a message. (indirect object)
9. Mrs. Raffsky spoke to us on the phone. (object of a preposition)

Quick tip 41.1

A subject pronoun is used when it is functioning as the subject of the sentence. An object pronoun is used when it is functioning as: (a) the direct object of the sentence; (b) the indirect object of the sentence; (c) the object of a preposition.

Test yourself 41.1

For each underlined pronoun below, indicate whether it is a subject or object pronoun. For you and it, you will need to look at how the pronoun is being used in the sentence.

	Subject pronoun	Object pronoun
Sample: I feel great.	x

- 6. They gave us their promise.
- 7. He is renting an apartment close to me.
- 8. I never saw it.
- 9. He gave her an ultimatum.
- 10. Brandon will even buy it from you.

To enhance your understanding

In the past, who and whom worked the same way as subject and object pronouns. In particular, who was used when functioning as a subject and whom was used when functioning as an object:

- 10. Who is running away? (subject: Who is doing the action.)
- 11. Whom does Katie like? (direct object: Whom is receiving the action.)

However, like all languages, English changes over time, and today, for all but the strictest traditional grammarians, who is used in all contexts, except when it directly follows a preposition (see below). So today a sentence like the following is perfectly grammatical:

- 12. Who does Katie like? (direct object)

While most of us prefer to use who in sentence 12, it's still okay to use whom in these contexts. It's just not necessary to do so, and it tends to sound very formal.

Note that whom must be used when it follows a preposition. In the following examples, whom and the preposition before it are underlined.

13. With whom would you like to speak?

14. To whom may I direct your question?

Lesson 42: Implied subjects: commands

1. Open that book right now!
2. Don't even think about crossing the street here!
3. Please be careful.

We all recognize a command when we hear one. We have seen that all sentences have a subject, but where is the subject of these commands? Speakers of English readily agree that these sentences do, in fact, have a subject. The subject, though not stated, is understood or implied to be you. Thus, when someone says "Wash the dishes!" you know they're talking to you. Commands are also called imperative sentences. In writing, command sentences often end with an exclamation point (!).

Quick tip 42.1

The subject of commands is an understood or implied you.

Test yourself 42.1

Indicate the subject of each sentence below. If it's a command, specify you as the subject. (We won't be using exclamation points in this exercise.)

Sample: Eat a well-balanced diet.	Subject you
Getting started (answers on p. 192)
1. These illnesses are treatable.
2. The judge had made a terrible mistake.
3. Be supportive.
4. Joan's father is an architect.
5. Stand up for your rights.
More practice (answers on the website)
6. Give me a break.
7. I can't give it to you.
8. Don't raise your voice to me.
9. Help me out with this.
10. She will be planting roses in that garden.

To enhance your understanding

There are a number of ways to prove what you, as a speaker of English, intuitively know: that you is the implicit subject of command sentences. We present one of these arguments here.

Take a look at the following sentences:

4. I held my breath.
5. You held your breath.
6. He held his breath.
7. She held her breath.

While these sentences are grammatical, the following sentences are not:

- 8a. *I held your breath.
- 8b. *I held his breath.
- 8c. *I held their breath.
- 9a. *You held my breath.
- 9b. *You held his breath.
- 9c. *You held their breath.

Can you explain why these sentences are ungrammatical? Clearly, a person cannot hold someone else's breath. Thus the two underlined pronouns must refer to the same person. If they don't, the sentence is not grammatical, as in 8 and 9 above.

Now what about commands which contain this same expression? Look at the following grammatical and ungrammatical commands:

10. Hold your breath!
11. *Hold my breath!
12. *Hold his breath!
13. *Hold their breath!

In fact, the only pronoun allowed in the command context Hold _____ breath! is your. Since we know that your must refer to the same person as the subject, it follows that the subject in the command must be you. That is, even though the you is not actually stated, we treat a command as though the subject were you.

Test yourself 42.2

For each sentence below, indicate its subject (stated or understood), direct object, if there is one, and indirect object, if there is one.

	Subject	Direct Object	Indirect Object

UNIT 14: COMPOUND PHRASES

Coordinating conjunctions, such as and, or, and but, are very powerful. As we discussed in Lesson 18, they can join any two units of the same type. Here are some examples with and, the most common coordinating conjunction:

1. He gave tennis lessons to the girl and her brother. (two noun phrases joined)
2. I cooked dinner and washed the laundry. (two verb phrases joined)
3. Their beautiful and charming hostess soon put them at ease. (two adjectives joined)
4. My mother listened to me seriously and patiently. (two adverbs joined)
5. The monkey ran up the tree and around its trunk. (two prepositional phrases joined)
6. I rode my bike and Teresa walked. (two sentences joined)

In this unit, we'll take a closer look at joined noun phrases and joined verb phrases.

Lesson 43: Compound noun phrases

What do you notice about this next sentence?

1. My friend worked at the diner and his cousin worked at the diner.

While it's a perfectly grammatical sentence, we often choose to make it less repetitious and say instead:

2. My friend and his cousin worked at the diner.

Since and, a coordinating conjunction, is joining two noun phrases here, my friend and his cousin is called a compound noun phrase.

Quick tip 43.1

Two noun phrases joined by a coordinating conjunction is called a compound noun phrase.

Here are some more examples, with the compound noun phrases underlined.

3. She slipped the photograph and both letters into her pocket.
4. The senator or his assistant will attend the event.
5. I'll be traveling to Kansas and Missouri next week on business.

Test yourself 43.1

Underline the compound noun phrases in each of the sentences below.

Sample: The public discovered that the company and its subsidiaries were cheating customers.

Getting started (answers on p. 197)

1. They had walked for miles and miles.
2. Henry felt guilt and shame for what he had done.
3. Vermont has lots of old houses and rustic barns.
4. The young bride is going shopping with her mother or mother-in-law.
5. Paying for gas and electricity costs a lot more this year than last.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Michael and I have been best friends for years.
7. Delta Airlines and Air France have flights to Paris from the U.S.
8. The lead actress or director will likely win Oscars.
9. Audi and BMW are owned by German companies.
10. The president and his foreign visitor held a joint press conference.

Lesson 44: Compound verb phrases

What do you notice about this next sentence?

1. Frank ran to the store and Frank purchased a few items.

While it's a perfectly grammatical sentence, we often choose to make it less repetitious and say instead:

2. Frank ran to the store and purchased a few items.

Since and, a coordinating conjunction, is joining two verb phrases here, ran to the store and purchased a few items is called a compound verb phrase.

Quick tip 44.1

Two verb phrases joined by a coordinating conjunction is called a compound verb phrase.

Here are some more examples, with the compound verb phrases underlined.

3. The general ran forward and led the troops.
4. She remained calm and followed her instincts.
5. His advisor presents him with good ideas but rarely helps him carry them out.

Test yourself 44.1

Underline the compound verb phrases in each of the sentences below.

Sample: I'll phone them and listen to their ideas.

Getting started (answers on p. 197)

1. They often call each other and talk all afternoon.
2. Adam wrote letters to the company and spoke to their representatives.
3. He invented the product but lost money in the process.
4. Stephen flew to Europe and visited his childhood friend.
5. I received your message yesterday but couldn't respond to it immediately.

PART III: GETTING STARTED WITH SENTENCES

As you've seen, in language we combine words to form phrases. We also combine phrases to form sentences, and there are various kinds of sentences. For example, there are statements and questions, simple sentences and combinations of sentences, and negative sentences and positive sentences. In Part III, we begin to explore different kinds of sentences, looking at the functions of sentences (Unit 15), how sentences can be combined (Unit 16), and the relationships between different sentences (Unit 17). Our goal is to help you recognize some of the more common and important sentence types.

UNIT 15: THE FUNCTIONS OF SENTENCES

Lesson 45: Identifying sentences by function

One way that a sentence can be described is according to the job that it's doing in a conversation. Compare these sentences:

1. That clown was funny.
2. Is she a physician?
3. Please wash the dishes.
4. What an exciting movie!

You know that sentence 1 is making a statement, sentence 2 is asking a question, sentence 3 is giving a command, and sentence 4 is expressing a strong emotion. These functions are summarized in Quick tip 45.1.

Quick tip 45.1

Sentences that make a statement are called declaratives; sentences that ask a question are called interrogatives; sentences that give a command are called imperatives; sentences that express strong emotion are called exclamations.

Here are a few more examples:

- | | |
|---|-----------------|
| 5. Edward's parents live on a farm. | (declarative) |
| 6. Have you accepted the fact that she'll never move? | (interrogative) |
| 7. Don't believe a word she says! | (imperative) |
| 8. That's silly! | (exclamation) |

Test yourself 45.1

Identify each of the sentences below as either declarative, interrogative, imperative, or exclamation.

Sample: How old are you now? interrogative

Getting started (answers on p. 206)

1. I'm shocked!
2. Rose and Charles are getting married in that house.
3. What a surprising announcement!
4. The weather was awful yesterday.
5. Watch out for that car!

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Didn't we have fun together?
7. What a performance!
8. Would you want to rent a movie tonight?

UNIT 15: THE FUNCTIONS OF SENTENCES

9. That was ridiculous!
10. Write that down, please!

Let's take a closer look at questions:

9. Do you like learning about sentences?
10. What do you like best?
11. You would rather be listening to music, wouldn't you?

These sentences demonstrate three different kinds of questions. Sentence 9 is an example of a yes/no question, because it can be answered with just a "yes" or "no." Here are some more yes/no questions:

12. Did you enjoy the music?
13. Is the television working?
14. Are you interested in applying for that job?

Quick tip 45.2

A yes/no question is one that can be answered by "yes" or "no."

Sentence 10 is called a wh- question because it begins with a wh- word, or question word.

Quick tip 45.3

A wh- question begins with one of the following wh- words (question words): when, where, what, why, which, who, whom, how. Example: Where is the meeting?

Notice that how is a wh- word, even though it doesn't begin with wh-.

Wh- questions cannot be answered with a "yes" or "no." Imagine the following bizarre dialogues:

- 15a. What time is it?
- 15b. Yes.
- 16a. Where are you going?
- 16b. No.
- 17a. Which dress should I wear?
- 17b. Yes.

You get the point.

Here are some more examples of wh- questions:

18. Why did they buy that house?
19. When should we meet?
20. How does that work?

The third kind of question, called a tag question, is demonstrated by sentence 11 above. Here are some more tag questions:

21. He's having a great time, isn't he?
22. It rained last night, didn't it?
23. Mrs. Williams was working hard, wasn't she?

Lesson 45: Identifying sentences by function

In tag questions, there's a regular statement followed by a tag; the tag is underlined in these examples.

Quick tip 45.4

A tag question contains a statement followed by a tag, such as could you? aren't they? hasn't he? Example: She is leaving soon, isn't she?

Test yourself 45.2

Decide if each question below is a yes/no question, wh- question, or tag question.

Sample: Why did he call his attorney? wh- question

Getting started (answers on p. 206)

1. He's not really crazy, is he?
2. Which is yours?
3. Are you interested?
4. Is the evidence against him compelling?
5. We have seen this before, haven't we?

More practice (answers on the website)

6. How did you respond to his question?
 7. When did they leave last night?
 8. Are you leaving already?
 9. Joan is an accomplished woman, isn't she?
 10. Is there anything left in the cookie jar?

UNIT 16: COMBINING SENTENCES

Lesson 46: Simple sentences

Most of the sentences we've looked at so far in this book are simple sentences, which means that they are sentences that are made up of just one sentence. But sentences can be made up of more than one sentence. Let's start by looking at a few sentences and comparing them.

1. The little boy laughed.
2. The little boy laughed and the little girl smiled.
3. The little boy laughed and the little girl smiled and their dog ran around in circles.

You can see that sentence 2 consists of two sentences joined by and and that sentence 3 consists of three sentences joined by and. Each of the sentences that make up a larger sentence is called a clause. So sentence 1 contains one clause, sentence 2 contains two clauses, and sentence 3 contains three clauses. Just as words combine to form phrases, phrases combine to form clauses, and clauses can combine to form sentences. A clause must contain at least a noun phrase functioning as the subject and a main verb.

Quick tip 46.1

A clause is a free-standing sentence or a sentence within a sentence; a clause or sentence contains at least a subject and a main verb.

Quick tip 46.2

A sentence can contain one or more clauses.

Here are some more examples of sentences containing only one clause:

4. That magazine looks interesting.
5. The officer followed the rules.
6. She greeted me at the door.

Notice that each contains only one subject and one verb phrase.

Quick tip 46.3

A sentence that contains only one clause, that is, one subject and one verb phrase, is called a simple sentence.

Are the following simple sentences?

7. on the floor
8. the extremely tall boy
9. were reading newspapers on the train

UNIT 16: COMBINING SENTENCES

None of these contains both a subject and a verb phrase, and so these are not sentences at all; they're just phrases. You may recognize sentence 7 as a preposition phrase, sentence 8 as a noun phrase, and sentence 9 as a verb phrase. (See Lessons 28, 29, and 30.)

Test yourself 46.1

In each simple sentence below, underline the subject and put a squiggly line beneath the verb phrase.

Sample: David listened to her response.

Getting started (answers on p. 231)

1. The committee presented its ideas to Congress.
2. I stayed in bed that day.
3. Nobody moved.
4. My favorite hotel is on Park Avenue.
5. I overslept today.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. We enjoy cruising on the Mississippi River.
7. Our cousin lives about an hour from us.
8. The young architect arrives in his office at 8:30 A.M. each weekday.
9. Whales are mammals.
10. Rain is good for the environment.

Test yourself 46.2

Decide if each item below is a simple sentence or just a phrase.

Sample: walking nearby phrase

Getting started (answers on p. 231)

1. I have never eaten caviar.
2. The department stores are having a sale this weekend.
3. Expensive antique jewelry.
4. Our home on the ranch.
5. Fresh-cut flowers on the table.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. Sailing around the world.
7. Sang my favorite song.
8. She is paying for her own tuition.
9. Exercising can leave you exhausted.
10. The bus is approaching.

What about sentences like the following?

10. That magazine and those books look interesting.
11. The officer and his men followed the rules.
12. She and her husband greeted me at the door.

Lesson 46: Simple sentences

The underlined part of each sentence is a compound noun phrase (see Lesson 43) and is considered to be one subject. So these sentences are all simple sentences. The same thing is true of compound verb phrases:

13. That magazine looks and seems interesting.
14. The officer followed the rules and saved the day.
15. She met and greeted me at the door.

The underlined parts of sentences 13–15 are compound verb phrases (see Lesson 44) and each is considered to be one verb phrase. So, again, these sentences are all simple sentences.

Lesson 47: Compound sentences

As we mentioned in Lesson 46, a sentence can contain more than one sentence within it, for example:

1. Jane put the glass vase on the table and her mother picked it up.

This is an example of a compound sentence. It actually contains two sentences. The first is: Jane put the glass vase on the table. The second is: Her mother picked it up. Since a sentence within a sentence is called a clause, we can also say that sentence 1 contains two clauses. Just as a simple sentence must contain at least a subject and a verb phrase, each of the sentences (clauses) within a compound sentence must contain its own subject and verb phrase.

Recall from Lesson 18 that conjunctions, like and, or, and but, join things. In fact, the two sentences within sentence 1 are joined by the conjunction and. Recall also that there are two kinds of conjunctions, coordinating and subordinating. The sentences in a compound sentence are joined together by a coordinating conjunction. As we discussed in Lesson 18, there are three common coordinating conjunctions; they are and, or, and but. Four less common ones are for, so, yet, and nor. (Remember FANBOYS, which contains the first letter of each.)

Quick tip 47.1

A sentence that is made up of two or more sentences (clauses) joined by a coordinating conjunction (most commonly and, or, and but) is called a compound sentence.

Test yourself 47.1

Each of the sentences below is a compound sentence consisting of two sentences (clauses). Underline each of the sentences which is in the compound sentence.

Sample: I felt restless after breakfast and I wandered around the house.

Getting started (answers on p. 231)

1. Andre pulled the car into the street, and Beth began reading the directions.
2. She enjoyed shopping for food, but she especially enjoyed cooking.
3. I can do this now, or I can do it later.
4. Dan does not feel well, yet he wants to go in to work.
5. We missed our flight, so we have to wait around the airport for the next available one.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. He does not like to change his mind, nor is he willing to compromise.
7. You deserve your good fortune, for you have a heart of gold.
8. The players are running onto the field, and then they are beginning to practice.
9. Stephanie likes to go to concerts, but she will not see an opera.
10. You can pay with cash, or you can take out a loan.

Test yourself 47.2

Decide if each sentence below is a simple sentence or a compound sentence. Remember that a simple sentence contains just one sentence (clause) while a compound sentence contains at least two sentences joined by a coordinating conjunction.

Sample: Wallace stared at him in the grocery store.

simple

Getting started (answers on p. 231)

1. He can't blame her for the problem.
2. Beth left the library, and she headed straight home.
3. He was watching her, but she was pretending not to notice.
4. We like him a lot.
5. The coach wants to win, but he will be happy with a tie.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. It will be a sunny day.
7. Jeremy likes his wife's new dress.
8. I will have a bowl of soup, but I don't want salad.
9. Sam called me at noon.
10. He will be going to Penn State, or he'll study at Temple University.

A compound sentence can contain more than two sentences:

2. Nora was Zach's stepmother but she treated him like her other children and he trusted her completely.

Here, the three sentences that make up this sentence are: (1) Nora was Zach's stepmother; (2) she treated him like her other children; (3) he trusted her completely. So the sentence There was a glass vase on the table and Jane picked it up contains two sentences, or clauses. The sentence Nora was Zach's stepmother but she treated him like her other children and he trusted her completely contains three sentences, or clauses. In fact, a compound sentence can contain any number of sentences, though we usually limit ourselves to just a few:

3. He turned his head away and he pretended to ignore her but he continued to listen to her and in fact he hung on her every word. (4 sentences or clauses)

Keep in mind that you can't tell if a sentence is simple or compound by how long it is; you need to see if it contains one or more than one complete sentence within it. For example, the following sentence, although it is long, is just a simple sentence:

4. The tall man with the violin case quickly climbed the stairs to the abandoned warehouse near the railroad tracks.

This is a simple sentence because it has just one subject, the tall man with the violin case, and one verb phrase – notice that there is just one verb, climbed. (The sentence is just long because it contains a few preposition phrases.) And the following sentence, although it is short, is a compound sentence: John laughed and Mary cried. It's a compound sentence because it contains two sentences that can stand alone: John laughed; Mary cried. Each of these has its own subject and verb phrase.

Test yourself 47.3

Each sentence below is either a simple or compound sentence. Identify the number of clauses in each sentence. If there is more than one clause in the sentence, underline each clause.

Sample: The bear watched his movements closely. 1

Getting started (answers on p. 231)

1. Vicki was always looking at herself in the mirror, but Mary Ann was extremely self-confident, and she never gave herself a second glance.
2. Her father was devoted to her.
3. Our firm's CEO will be flying to Chicago next week, but he'll be returning the same day.
4. The lady in the elegant blue dress entered the well-lit room with her perky little dog in her arms.
5. Our boat was hit with strong winds, and we had to return to our cabins.

6. We don't have much time left in the zoo, but we should visit the bird cage, and we must see the monkeys, or we should at least feed the goats in the petting area, but I definitely want to take a look at the elephants.
7. We can catch a movie, or we can visit a museum, but we won't be seeing a Broadway show.
8. Many people walk in the woods in autumn.
9. The economy is getting worse, and many people are worried about their jobs.
10. My car is getting old, and it's pretty banged up, but I hope to get another year out of it.

Keep in mind that a compound phrase (Lessons 43 and 44) is not the same thing as a compound sentence. For example, the following sentence has a compound noun phrase (underlined):

5. The teacher graded the students' exams and their papers.

We've certainly got a coordinating conjunction, and, in sentence 5. However, the question is, what is the and joining? If we look at what's on each side of the and, we find the following: The teacher graded the students' exams, which is a sentence, and their papers; their papers is not a sentence by itself. In this case, the conjunction and is joining two noun phrases: the students' exams and their papers. It's not joining two complete sentences, and so the sentence is not a compound sentence but is a simple sentence.

Test yourself 47.4

Decide if each sentence below is a simple or compound sentence. Remember that a compound sentence contains a complete sentence on either side of the conjunction.

Lesson 47: Compound sentences

Sample: Kyle turned around and stared at the screen.

Lesson 48: Complex sentences

In the last lesson, we talked about compound sentences such as:

1. Beth said hello to her mother's friend and then she walked outside.

Each of the sentences (clauses) that is part of the compound sentence plays an equal role in the sentence; one clause is not superior to or more important than the other, in terms of the structure of the sentence.

Now let's look at some other sentences:

2. Harry was only fifteen when his mother sent him away to school.
3. Mr. Edwards looked her straight in the eye although he wasn't really sincere.
4. I won't tell you the answer unless you agree to help.

Sentences 2–4 also each contain two sentences, or clauses, which are combined to make a larger sentence. However, one of these sentences is more important than the other. The more important sentence is called the main clause, or independent clause; the less important sentence, the one that is a subpart of the main clause, is called the dependent clause or subordinate clause (see Lesson 19). Each clause, whether it's a main clause or subordinate clause, has its own subject and verb phrase. Sentences that contain a main clause and at least one dependent clause are called complex sentences.

The main clause of each of the following sentences is in bold; the dependent clause is underlined:

5. Harry was only fifteen when his mother sent him away to school.
6. Mr. Edwards looked her straight in the eye although he wasn't really sincere.
7. I won't tell you the answer unless you agree to help.

Quick tip 48.1

A complex sentence consists of at least two sentences (clauses): a main clause and a dependent clause. The dependent clause is a subpart of the main clause and adds information to it. Example, with the dependent clause underlined: Sally visited her before she moved.

Recall that, in a compound sentence, the clauses are joined by a coordinating conjunction such as and, or, and but. In a complex sentence, the dependent clause is joined to the rest of the sentence by a subordinating conjunction. (We introduced subordinating conjunctions in Lesson 19; you may want to check back there to refresh your memory.) The common subordinating conjunctions of English are repeated here for reference.

Lesson 48: Complex sentences

after	even though	than	whenever
although	how	that	where
as	if	though	wherever
as if	in order that	till	whether as though	once	unless	while because	rather than	until	which
before	since	what	who
even if	so (that)	when	why

Quick tip 48.2

A dependent clause is joined to another clause by a subordinating conjunction such as although, if, where.

Quick tip 48.3

The easiest way to identify a dependent clause is to look for a subordinating conjunction and see if it's followed by a sentence. If it is, then the subordinating conjunction plus the sentence directly following it is a dependent clause.

Test yourself 48.1

For each complex sentence below, underline the dependent clause. Remember to look for the subordinating conjunction, which is the first word of the dependent clause.

Sample: Helen stared in dismay at the floor after she opened the dining room door.

Getting started (answers on p. 232)

- His father is returning to London because the furniture is arriving.
- Selma smiled at him although she had never felt less like smiling.
- He felt a great affection for his guardian until he discovered the truth.
- I am going to solve this crossword puzzle even if it takes me all day.
- James accepted the job before he checked with his wife.

- You are behaving as if you were the boss.
- I will not speak to you unless you tell me the truth.
- New Orleans has not been the same since it was devastated by a hurricane.
- Al tries to speak French when he is in Montreal.

In the complex sentences we've looked at so far, the dependent clause follows the main clause. But sometimes the dependent clause comes before the main clause. (Again, see Lesson 19.) In these next examples of complex sentences, the dependent clauses are underlined:

UNIT 16: COMBINING SENTENCES

8. After he uttered her name, an awful silence fell on the room.
9. While we hurried to the restaurant, the rain continued to pour.
10. Even though she was a difficult woman, they had a good marriage.

Test yourself 48.2

For each complex sentence below, underline the dependent clause. Remember to look for the subordinating conjunction, which is the first word of the dependent clause. The dependent clause will either be before or after the main clause.

Sample: If you continue on this highway, you'll end up in the wrong place.

Getting started (answers on p. 232)

1. When Elizabeth spoke, Ben listened attentively.
2. Before you blame him, think about your own responsibility.
3. You should pay for automobile insurance even if your car is old.
4. Unless the train arrives soon, we'll miss our appointment.

10. She is going to succeed wherever she ends up.

Test yourself 48.3

For each complex sentence below, underline the subject of the dependent clause (not of the main clause).

Sample: I had an interesting conversation with him while we were walking home.

Getting started (answers on p. 232)

1. Even though the village supported the emperor, it still paid numerous taxes.
2. I like to sit on the balcony when the weather is nice.
3. George did it because he recognized the woman.
4. Once I have made up my mind, I usually do not change it.
5. Someone rang the doorbell while we were having lunch.

8. The bus arrived at the station before I could finish the newspaper.
9. They started learning Chinese so that they could understand their in-laws better.
10. After you left, I began washing the dishes.

A complex sentence contains only one main clause, but it can contain more than one dependent clause. In the following examples, there is a main clause and two dependent clauses. The main clause is again in bold; the dependent clauses are underlined. Notice that we sometimes have flexibility in terms of the placement of each of the clauses.

Lesson 48: Complex sentences

- 11a. Harry was only fifteen when his mother sent him away to school, although he looked much older.
- 11b. When his mother sent him away to school, Harry was only fifteen, although he looked much older.
- 11c. Although he looked much older when his mother sent him away to school, Harry was only fifteen.
- 12a. I won't tell you the answer unless you agree to help, because this issue is confidential.
- 12b. Unless you agree to help, I won't tell you the answer, because this issue is confidential.
- 12c. Because this issue is confidential, unless you agree to help, I won't tell you the answer.

- 9. Unless you stop complaining, we are turning right around.
- 10. He likes foreign movies a lot.

Test yourself 48.5

For each sentence below, indicate if it is a simple sentence, a compound sentence, or a complex sentence. Be sure to determine the kind of conjunction (coordinating or subordinating) in order to help you decide.

Sample: We were always polite to one another although we were never close. complex

Getting started (answers on p. 232)

- 1. She pursued her goals relentlessly but she didn't always achieve them.
- 2. I have made numerous mistakes over the years.
- 3. I won't tell you unless you agree to help because I can't take the risk.

8. While Mr. Kagan was at work, the air conditioning stopped working at his house.

9. I have known him since we moved to this town.

10. Ashley and Brian wanted to shop at that store.

Complex sentences can have different kinds of dependent clauses. The ones we've talked about so far are called adverbial clauses because, like adverbs, they typically tell us more about a verb, adjective, or another adverb. For example, in the sentence, Things improved after Mr. Eliot arrived, the underlined dependent clause is telling us something about the time of the action.

In other complex sentences, dependent clauses can be used as noun phrases. Take a look at the following pair of sentences:

13a. That statement is silly.

13b. What Mark just said is silly.

In sentence 13a, that statement is a noun phrase. In sentence 13b, what Mark just said is a dependent clause which is functioning as a noun phrase of the main sentence. When a dependent clause is functioning as a noun phrase, it's called a noun clause. Here are some more sentence pairs in which the second sentence of the pair has a dependent clause (underlined) acting as a noun phrase.

14a. I know the truth. simple sentence

14b. I know that you're right. complex sentence

15a. It remains unknown. simple sentence

15b. Why they left town remains unknown. complex sentence

Notice that noun clauses look just like other dependent clauses: they begin with a subordinating conjunction and contain both a subject and a verb phrase. However, when a sentence has a noun clause, the rest of the sentence cannot always stand alone; it needs the noun clause to be complete. For example, in sentence 15b, remains unknown is not a complete sentence.

Test yourself 48.6

Underline the dependent clause in each of the complex sentences below. It will be either an adverbial clause or a noun clause.

Sample: Whatever you do is acceptable.

Lesson 48: Complex sentences

Getting started (answers on p. 232)

1. I'll stay with Jeanette until Peter comes home.
2. That my candidate will win is obvious.
3. Although Mrs. Craft was tired, she insisted on making us dinner.
4. We were quite confident that we had made the right decision.
5. They want to find out why the waitress was so rude to them.

6. He did not know which highway led to the Canadian border.
7. The assistant manager knew that she was not going to be promoted this time.
8. Wherever we travel we like to visit museums.
9. I can speak Italian better than you can speak French.
10. We were tired of waiting, so we left.

We've been telling you to look for the subordinating conjunction to help you find the dependent clause. But what about these next sentences (with the dependent clauses underlined)?

16a. I know that you're right.

16b. I know you're right.

17a. You believed that the defendant was innocent.

17b. You believed the defendant was innocent.

As you can see, we can delete the subordinating conjunction that in a noun clause when the dependent clause follows the main clause. However, if the dependent clause comes before the main clause, the subordinating conjunction that cannot be deleted:

18a. That her daughter is talented has been obvious for years.

18b. *Her daughter is talented has been obvious for years.

19a. That the defendant was innocent became clear during the trial.

19b. *The defendant was innocent became clear during the trial.

Quick tip 48.4

In a noun clause, the subordinating conjunction that can be deleted following a main clause. Example: I think (that) it's going to rain.

So when you don't see a subordinating conjunction in a sentence, but the sentence has more than one subject and verb phrase, ask yourself if you can insert that somewhere. If so, then you'll know you have a dependent clause.

Test yourself 48.7

Underline the dependent clauses in each of the sentences below. In some cases, the conjunction that will have been deleted.

Sample: They knew she would escape.

7. The president said we should all conserve fuel.
8. You can do the food shopping first, or you can do your other errands.
9. Justin generally eats his soup with bread and butter.
10. I know the woman in the blue dress.

There's another very common type of subordinating clause, called a relative clause. Here are some examples:

20. I'll tell my husband, who will be home soon.
21. The person who knows her best is Richard.
22. Miss Livingston had her money in the bank that failed.

Since there's quite a bit to say about relative clauses, we've given them their own lesson, which is next.

Lesson 49: Sentences with relative clauses

A well-known children's story starts with the line, This is the house that Jack built. It continues,

This is the malt that lay in the house that Jack built. This is the rat that ate the malt that lay in the house that Jack built. The story continues until it ends with the following sentence: This is the farmer sowing his corn, that kept the cock that crowed in the morn, that waked the priest all shaven and shorn, that married the man all tattered and torn, that kissed the maiden all forlorn, that milked the cow with the crumpled horn, that tossed the dog, that worried the cat, that killed the rat, that ate the malt that lay in the house that Jack built.

(www.amherst.edu/~rjyanco94/literature/mothergoose/rhymes/thisisthehousethatjackbuilt.html, retrieved November 9, 2008.)

This story gives us a good demonstration of complex sentences with relative clauses, which are a kind of dependent clause (see Lesson 48). For example, in the sentence This is the house that Jack built, the main clause is This is the house, and the dependent, relative clause is that Jack built. The relative clause acts as an adjective: it modifies the noun phrase the house, telling us more about it. This is why relative clauses are also referred to as adjective clauses.

Quick tip 49.1

A relative clause (adjective clause) is a kind of dependent clause; it provides additional information about a noun phrase in the main clause. Example (relative clause underlined): I brought the cookies that are on the plate.

In each sentence below, the relative clause is underlined, and the noun phrase which the relative clause is modifying is in bold. The main clause can stand on its own as a sentence without the relative clause; the relative clause just provides additional information about the noun phrase it's modifying and cannot stand alone. Like other clauses, a relative clause has its own subject and verb phrase.

1. She transferred the plate to the tray that she just washed.
2. Blanche thought about the man who was living in Italy at the time.
3. He called the company that usually supplies the pipes.

Test yourself 49.1

Underline the relative clause in each of the sentences below.

Sample: Mr. Sanders was wearing a suit that he bought in Italy.

Getting started (answers on p. 233)

1. He paid no attention to the newspaper which was next to him.
2. The police arrested the man whom they had been looking for.
3. Mrs. Peterson was reaching for the phone that was nearest her chair.
4. He might recognize the woman who is hosting the show.
5. Cliff bought a present that was just perfect for his girlfriend.

UNIT 16: COMBINING SENTENCES

More practice (answers on the website)

6. I am renting an apartment that has two bedrooms.
7. She met someone whose daughter had graduated from Duke University.
8. Are you going to eat the desert that I baked especially for you?
9. He came to the party with a friend whom I haven't seen in ages.
10. You should pay for your vacation with the money that I gave you.

The relative clause doesn't necessarily follow the main sentence (clause); it can also be within the main sentence. In the following sentences, the relative clause is underlined and the main sentence (clause) is in bold. In sentences 4 and 5, the relative clause follows the main clause; in sentences 6 and 7, it's inside the main clause.

4. I've brought the horse which has been specially trained.
5. We tipped the waiter who had served us so well.
6. The man who was living in Italy at the time knew all the facts.
7. The company that usually supplies the pipes has gone out of business.

Again, if the relative clause (the underlined part) is removed, the main clause can still stand on its own as a sentence.

Test yourself 49.2

Underline the relative clause in each of the sentences below. The relative clause may be anywhere in the sentence.

Sample: A business that manufactures engines can be difficult to run.

Getting started (answers on p. 233)

1. She gave him a smile that lit up her face.
2. The professor who gives easy tests is on sabbatical this semester.
3. The approaches which are most likely to succeed are too complicated.
4. The hotel which is near the shore doesn't open until April.
5. Are you satisfied with the computer that your parents bought for you?

8. I will vote for the candidate whose values are close to mine.
9. The gym that she belongs to is only a mile away.
10. He is still madly in love with the woman whom he married 15 years ago.

We've seen (in Lesson 48) that other dependent clauses are linked to the rest of the sentence by subordinating conjunctions. The same is true of relative clauses. Those subordinating conjunctions which link relative clauses to the rest of the sentence are called relative pronouns, and you may remember that we talked about them in Lesson 26. The relative pronoun which introduces the relative clause is underlined in the sentences below:

Lesson 49: Sentences with relative clauses

8. I just read a book which had a really exciting ending.
9. The soldier whom I'm writing to recently came home on leave.
10. She signed a deal with the publishing company that gave her the best offer.

Note that words that are relative pronouns can also be used in other ways. For example, who can be used as a relative pronoun, but it can also be used as a question word, as in the sentence, Who married her?

Quick tip 49.2

Relative clauses begin with one of the relative pronouns: that, which, who, whom, whose.

Test yourself 49.3

Each of the sentences below contains a relative clause. Underline the relative pronoun that begins the relative clause.

Sample: The student whom I spoke to was confused.

Getting started (answers on p. 233)

1. The hotel chain that Greg founded has since gone out of business.
2. He phoned the woman who was writing the article.
3. Jill resents the man whose father won the lottery.
4. The highway which I take to work needs repair.

8. Students whose names are not on the class roster should see me after class.
9. We are going to patronize the pharmacy which has just opened up.
10. I don't read all the magazines that I subscribe to.

Just as a sentence can have more than one dependent clause, it can have more than one relative clause. We saw this earlier, in the sentences about Jack, and see it here as well:

11. Pablo married the woman whose sister lived in a house which was next door to the one that I bought from the man who had first built it.

Even though this sentence is very long and contains four relative clauses, it is still perfectly grammatical.

Test yourself 49.4

9. Friends who keeps their word are the kinds of friends that I like.
10. The parking garage which is on the top floor of the building that is on the corner of the intersection is almost always full.

You may be wondering why relative pronouns are called pronouns. You know that pronouns replace noun phrases in a sentence. As we discussed in Lesson 26, all of the relative pronouns except whose do the same thing.

Quick tip 49.3

A relative pronoun connects the relative clause to the rest of the sentence. All of the relative pronouns (except whose) also replace a noun phrase in the relative clause. (Whose replaces a determiner.)

Let's review how Quick tip 49.3 works in the following sentence, whose relative clause is underlined:

12. Blanche thought about the man who was living in Italy.

What noun phrase is the relative pronoun who replacing? The who refers to the noun phrase the man.

Here's another example:

13. He called the company that usually supplied the pipes.

In this case, what does the relative pronoun that replace? It replaces the noun phrase the company.

Test yourself 49.5

For each sentence below, underline the relative clause and put a squiggly line under the main clause.

10. They watched TV when they got home.

Let's take a look at the following sentence:

14. The man whom I interviewed was not very knowledgeable.

As we discussed above, the sentence contains a relative clause, whom I interviewed, which begins with the relative pronoun whom. Will this sentence still be grammatical if the relative pronoun, whom, is left out?

15. The man I interviewed was not very knowledgeable.

If you think this sentence sounds fine, you're absolutely right. Here are some more examples:

- 16a. The permit that the builders applied for was denied.

- 16b. The permit the builders applied for was denied.

- 17a. The celebrity who Jack photographed left the theater early.

- 17b. The celebrity Jack photographed left the theater early.

You will notice that when the relative pronoun is omitted, as in sentences 15, 16b, and 17b, one noun phrase is directly followed by another noun phrase: the man + I in sentence 15, the permit + the builders in sentence 16b, and the celebrity + Jack in sentence 17b. So if you see a sentence that has two noun phrases next to each other, check to see if the sentence would still be grammatical and mean the same thing if you put a relative pronoun between the two noun phrases; this will help you identify relative clauses.

UNIT 16: COMBINING SENTENCES

Quick tip 49.4

A relative pronoun may be omitted before a noun phrase. Example: The movie (that) I saw was exciting.

Test yourself 49.7

Underline the relative clause in each of the sentences below. In some cases, the relative pronoun will have been deleted.

Sample: The waiter set the table he had placed outside the restaurant.

Getting started (answers on p. 234)

1. The little square in the town we visited contained benches.
2. Other famous people will be performing at the theater that my brother works at.
3. The pilot who flew the aircraft must have been well trained.
4. My neighbor owns the horse which won this race.
5. The guest I invited is sleeping on the sofa.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. We left a nice tip for the waiter who served our delicious dinner.
7. The tennis racket I bought for you was made abroad.
8. The author whose book I am reading will go on a promotional tour.
9. The thing I like best about Jill is her positive attitude.
10. The woman who is running for mayor of this city is well known.

When we look at relative clauses more closely, we find that there are actually two types: restrictive relative clauses and nonrestrictive relative clauses. Compare the following sentences; the relative clauses are underlined.

18. Bridget likes doughnuts that have chocolate frosting.

19. She likes Peter Bolton, who is her son's piano teacher.

In sentence 18, the relative clause that have chocolate frosting is telling us exactly which doughnuts Bridget really likes. The clause is telling us that Bridget doesn't necessarily like all doughnuts; she specifically likes those that have chocolate frosting. This kind of relative clause, which limits or restricts the noun phrase it's modifying, is called a restrictive relative clause.

In contrast, in sentence 19, the relative clause who is her son's piano teacher is telling us something about Peter Bolton, but if we omit this relative clause, we still know who Peter is, although we don't know the extra information that he is her son's piano teacher. This type of relative clause is called a nonrestrictive relative clause. It's always separated from the main sentence by commas. (You can think of it as being separated from the main clause by commas because it's not essential.) When we say a sentence with a nonrestrictive relative clause, we usually pause at the commas separating it from the main sentence.

Here are some more examples to help clarify the difference between restrictive and nonrestrictive relative clauses:

20. The employees who were upset came to the meeting.

21. The employees, who were upset, came to the meeting.

What's the difference in meaning between these two sentences? According to sentence 20, only those employees who were upset came to the meeting. The other employees didn't come to the meeting. That is, sentence 20 restricts the employees who came to the meeting to only those who were upset. Sentence 20 thus contains a restrictive relative clause.

What we know from sentence 21 is that employees came to the meeting. In addition, we know that those employees were upset. The clause provides additional information about the employees but doesn't restrict, or limit, which employees came to the meeting. There may be other employees who were also upset but who didn't come to the meeting. This clause is a nonrestrictive relative clause.

Again, notice that in sentence 21 the relative clause is separated from the main clause by commas. Sentence 21 is also said with pauses where the commas are.

Note that one can always remove a relative clause, of either type, and still end up with a grammatical sentence. However, if the restrictive relative clause is removed, some of the information needed to fully identify the noun phrase we're talking about is missing.

Quick tip 49.5

A restrictive relative clause limits the noun phrase which it is modifying; a nonrestrictive relative clause does not. A nonrestrictive relative clause is separated from the main clause by pauses, and, when written, it is separated from the main clause by commas. Examples: The dogs which were friendly were being trained as Seeing Eye dogs (restrictive). The dogs, which were friendly, were being trained as Seeing Eye dogs (nonrestrictive).

Test yourself 49.8

Decide if each relative clause, underlined in the sentences below, is a restrictive or nonrestrictive relative clause.

Sample: The laundry which had just been folded was on the counter. restrictive

Getting started (answers on p. 234)

- Mrs. Smith, who owns the house, was not interested in selling.
- A huge truck, which someone had painted bright yellow, stood in the driveway.
- The children who had just come back from the class trip were restless.
- The maid broke an antique lamp, which was very valuable.
- The painting I brought home will be perfect for the den.

- The bushes we planted last year are growing nicely.
- Brianna is mad at John, who offended her family.
- I am returning your bicycle, which you lent me last week.

UNIT 16: COMBINING SENTENCES

9. The students who made the presentation did a great job.
10. This road, which we have traveled many times, is treacherous.

Test yourself 49.9

Underline the relative clause in each of the sentences below. Then decide if it is restrictive or nonrestrictive.

Sample: Rome, which is a lovely city, was her first destination. nonrestrictive

Getting started (answers on p. 234)

1. The Frenchman who is from Lyons completed the project.
2. The general, who knew nothing about the matter, nonetheless voiced his opinion.
3. A small disturbance, which was getting louder and louder, finally attracted our attention.
4. Jeremy, who was blushing profusely, asked Tatiana for some help.
5. Jim wasn't the person she wanted to hire.

6. The young lady, whose hobby was stamp collecting, was charming.
7. The man who is having a drink at the bar looks familiar.
8. The taxi I called took me to the airport.
9. Her report, which she prepared carefully, was well received.
10. The children, who are playing with their new toys, are unusually quiet.

To enhance your understanding

Proper names are not modified by restrictive relative clauses. Here is an example:

22a. George, who is an architect, is a good friend of mine. (nonrestrictive)

22b. *George who is an architect is a good friend of mine. (restrictive)

Since the identity of a proper noun is already well defined, it makes sense that restrictive relative clauses do not modify proper nouns.

Notice that if we want to be very specific about a proper name, to differentiate it from others with the same name, then using a restrictive relative clause is entirely appropriate:

23. The George who is an architect is a good friend of mine. (restrictive)

24. The France that I am familiar with is a very lovely country. (restrictive)

To further enhance your understanding

A relative clause can modify any noun phrase in a sentence, whether that noun phrase is functioning as a subject, direct object, indirect object, or object of a preposition. For example, in sentence 25, the relative clause refers to the direct object of the main clause:

25. My sister likes the house which has a large swimming pool.

And in sentence 26, the relative clause refers to the indirect object of the main clause:

26. My sister sold the house to a family that has three children.

Lesson 50: Compound-complex sentences

You know (from Lesson 47) that sentence 1 is a compound sentence:

1. Martha left me a note but I can't find it.

You also know (from Lesson 48) that sentence 2 is a complex sentence:

2. She answered him impatiently when he questioned her credentials.

Like all compound sentences, sentence 1 contains at least two complete sentences joined by a coordinating conjunction, in this case but. And like all complex sentences, sentence 2 contains a main clause with at least one dependent clause; the dependent clause begins with a subordinating conjunction, in this case when.

But what about this next sentence?

3. I'll leave a message for the plumber but I'm not sure that he'll get it.

You won't be surprised to learn that sentences such as sentence 3, which are both compound (two clauses connected with but) and complex (two clauses connected with that), are called compound-complex sentences. These are sentences that contain at least two main clauses, and at least one of the main clauses has at least one dependent clause.

Quick tip 50.1

A compound-complex sentence is a combination of a compound and a complex sentence: it has at least two main clauses and at least one dependent clause. Example: His friends were always there for William, and he appreciated the help that they often gave him.

Here are some more examples of compound-complex sentences, with the complete sentences in bold and the dependent clauses underlined:

4. While the house looked nice from the outside, the floors were sagging and the walls were crumbling.
5. The woman who lives next door is very friendly but I forgot her name.
6. I thanked him for his efforts but he insisted that he hadn't minded.
7. If we don't hurry, we'll have to see a different movie, or we'll have to come back later.

UNIT 17: RELATED SENTENCES

Lesson 51: Looking at related sentences

One interesting characteristic of language is that sentences can be related, in a consistent way, to other sentences. What do we mean by this? Let's start by looking at some related sentences which we've seen before.

- 1a. She looked up the answer.
- 1b. She looked the answer up.
- 2a. We will just drop off the files.
- 2b. We will just drop the files off.
- 3a. The professor pointed out the correct answer.
- 3b. The professor pointed the correct answer out.

You can see that one member of each pair is related to the other in a systematic way: the verb and its particle (both underlined) can either be next to each other or the particle can be on the other side of the next noun phrase. (See Lesson 11.) The important point here is that we can't change the structure of a sentence in any random way. For example, we can't say She up looked the answer*.

Let's look at other examples of related sentences:

- 4a. Mary gave the information to Robert.
- 4b. Mary gave Robert the information.
- 5a. She told the truth to her granddaughter.
- 5b. She told her granddaughter the truth.
- 6a. They bought a car for their teenage daughter.
- 6b. They bought their teenage daughter a car.

Once again, you can see that these indirect object pairs are related to each other in a systematic way. (See Lesson 40.) And again, we can't just randomly change them; for example, we can't say, Mary Robert the information gave*.

Here's one more example of related sentences:

- 7a. I know that you're right.
- 7b. I know you're right.
- 8a. You believed that the defendant was innocent.
- 8b. You believed the defendant was innocent.
- 9a. The residents of the village feel that the new highway is important.
- 9b. The residents of the village feel the new highway is important.

Here, while the word that can be deleted (see Lesson 48), we can't delete just anything. For example, we can't say I that you're right*.

Test yourself 51.1

Change each sentence below into its related "partner," using the examples above as a guide.

Sample: His editor put down the manuscript. His editor put the manuscript down.

.....

8. He promised his friend a good time.

9. The accountant figured that he would spend about three hours with his client.

.....

10. They gave money to their local chapter.

.....

So far, the related sentence pairs we've looked at have the same meaning. For example, She looked up the answer and She looked the answer up mean exactly the same thing. But sometimes sentences are related to each other in a consistent way, even though their meanings are not the same. For example, here's a statement:

10a. Amanda is working today.

Can you turn it into a yes/no question (Lesson 45)? The related yes/no question is:

10b. Is Amanda working today?

No native speaker of English would make the yes/no question something like, Working Amanda today is*. That's because there's a systematic relationship between statements and yes/no questions, even though they don't have the same meaning.

Try another one:

11a. That boy has eaten an enormous breakfast.

The related yes/no question is:

11b. Has that boy eaten an enormous breakfast?

Here are some more examples:

- 12a. Hank was laughing.
- 12b. Was Hank laughing?
- 13a. That artist had chosen to represent animals in his drawings.
- 13b. Had that artist chosen to represent animals in his drawings?
- 14a. You can see the old hotel near the railroad station.
- 14b. Can you see the old hotel near the railroad station?

Another example of related sentences can be seen when we look at statements and tag questions (Lesson 45).

For example, here's a statement:

- 15a. Molly should do that.

Can you turn it into a tag question (Lesson 45)? The related tag question is:

- 15b. Molly should do that, shouldn't she?

No native speaker of English would respond with the tag question, Mary should do that, can't they?* That's because, again, there's a systematic relationship between statements and tag questions, even though they don't have the same meaning.

Try another one:

- 16a. The students are waiting to have lunch.

The related tag question is:

- 16b. The students are waiting to have lunch, aren't they?

Here are some more examples:

- 17a. He had mailed the letter yesterday.
- 17b. He had mailed the letter yesterday, hadn't he?
- 18a. Mr. Peters was wearing a hat with a wide brim.
- 18b. Mr. Peters was wearing a hat with a wide brim, wasn't he?
- 19a. Rebecca will wait for her.
- 19b. Rebecca will wait for her, won't she?

See Lesson 53 for further discussion of yes/no questions and tag questions.

So far, we've been looking at sentence types that we've already come across in other lessons. However, there are many more sentences in English that are related. In the next two lessons, we'll take a closer look at two sets of related sentences that we have not discussed before.

Lesson 52: Active and passive sentences

So far in this book we've seen lots of sentences with the following pattern:

1a. The witch kidnaped Esmeralda.

In this sentence, the witch is the subject (the doer of the action); kidnaped is an action verb, and Esmeralda is the direct object (the receiver of the action). (See Lessons 38 and 39.) This word order – subject first, then verb, then direct object – is typical of English sentences. Sentences like this, with the subject before its verb, are called active sentences (or are said to be in the active voice).

Quick tip 52.1

Sentences with the subject before the verb are called active sentences. Example: Charley repaired this computer.

What do you notice about this next sentence?

1b. Esmeralda was kidnaped by the witch.

It has basically the same meaning as sentence 1a, but with a different structure. We can see that the noun phrase the witch is still the subject; however, it no longer occurs before the verb. It occurs after the verb and following the word by. The direct object noun phrase, Esmeralda, is now before the verb. Sentences with this pattern are called passive sentences (or are said to be in the passive voice).

Quick tip 52.2

Sentences which do not have the subject before the verb are called passive sentences. Example: This computer was repaired by Charley.

Here are some more examples of active and passive sentence pairs:

- 2a. My friend mentioned his excellent reputation. (active)
- 2b. His excellent reputation was mentioned by my friend. (passive)
- 3a. Nellie sent the Browns a present. (active)
- 3b. The Browns were sent a present by Nellie. (passive)
- 4a. The bird ate the worm. (active)
- 4b. The worm was eaten by the bird. (passive)

Test yourself 52.1

Decide if each sentence is active or passive. To help you decide, see if the subject (doer of the action) is before or after the verb.

Sample: The story was told by a great writer. passive

Getting started (answers on p. 250)

1. The landscaper was hired by her neighbor.

2. Tim chose the pastries.

Lesson 52: Active and passive sentences

3. Christine had driven about thirty or forty miles that day.
4. Little Suzie's picture was taken by her grandmother.
5. We are cooking something for lunch.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. This investor made a lot of money.
7. He was appointed by the mayor.
8. The votes were counted by the election commission.
9. The soprano is singing a famous aria.
10. My credit card company has responded to my inquiry.

In order for an active sentence to have a related passive sentence, it must have a direct object. Unlike the sentences we have looked at so far in this lesson, the following sentences do not have a direct object; therefore they don't have related passive sentences.

5. The train arrived late.
6. We are traveling to Mexico.
7. Harry studied.

Active and passive sentences are related to each other in a systematic way. Let's look more closely at this relationship by examining sentences 8a and 8b.

- 8a. The policeman saw the criminals. (active)
8b. The criminals were seen by the policeman. (passive)

We will see that there are five ways in which passive sentences like 8b differ from active sentences like 8a. We'll now discuss each of the characteristics of passive sentences.

First, as we mentioned in Quick tip 52.2, the subject (doer of the action) follows the verb:

- 8b. The criminals were seen by the policeman.

Second, the word by precedes the subject:

- 8b. The criminals were seen by the policeman.

Third, the noun phrase that follows the verb in the active sentence occurs before the verb in the passive sentence:

- 8b. The criminals were seen by the policeman.

Fourth, passive sentences have a form of be (am, is, are, was, were, be, being) before the verb:

- 8b. The criminals were seen by the policeman.

We talked about auxiliary, or helping, verbs in Lessons 31–36; the passive be is also a kind of helping verb.

And fifth, the main verb following the passive be is in a special form:

- 8b. The criminals were seen by the policeman.

You may recognize this special form of the verb as the past participle form of the verb, the same form of the verb that follows the helping verb have. (See Lesson 33.) That is, just as each of the other helping verbs has an effect on the verb following it (see Lesson 36), the passive be also has an effect on the verb following it: the verb must be in its past participle form.

Use the following exercises to help you focus in on the differences between active and passive sentences.

Test yourself 52.2

In the passive sentences below, underline the passive be helping verb and put a squiggly line under the past participle form of the verb that follows it.

Sample: Roller-coasters are designed by that company.

Getting started (answers on p. 250)

1. Amazing results are produced by that approach.
2. Marjorie Kelly was given first prize by the judges.
3. Those words were spoken by Abraham Lincoln.

We've said that passive sentences contain the word by. Let's compare by in these next two sentences:

9. The two bags were lost by Dina.

10. She lives by the seashore.

UNIT 17: RELATED SENTENCES

Although both bys are prepositions, their functions are not the same. In sentence 9, by is in a passive sentence, letting us know that the doer of the action (in this case, Dina) is following. But in sentence 10, the seashore is not doing anything; rather, by is telling us about location.

Test yourself 52.5

Each of the sentences below contains the word by. Decide if it is being used as a marker of the passive or to indicate location.

Sample: There were too many cars parked by the school. location

Getting started (answers on p. 250)

- 1. The trooper is pleased by the strategy.
- 2. The building by the bank is new.
- 3. He was confused by that new information.
- 4. This afternoon we rested by the pond.
- 5. The rally was attended by college students.

- 7. The lost puppy was found by its owner.
- 8. The newlyweds were married by their hometown priest.
- 9. The case is tried by a newly elected judge.
- 10. She was reading by the fireplace.

As we mentioned, passive be (in all its forms) is a kind of helping verb, occurring right before the main verb. In a sentence that has other helping verbs as well, the passive be is always the last one. You can see that in the following sentences, where the form of the passive be is underlined and the other helping verbs are in bold:

- 11. The letter will be answered by McCarthy.
- 12. The letter has been answered by McCarthy.
- 13. The letter is being answered by McCarthy.
- 14. The letter should have been answered by McCarthy.

Quick tip 52.3

The passive be helping verb is always placed after all the other helping verbs, right before the main verb. Example: The table has been set by the waitress.

Test yourself 52.6

Underline the form of the passive be helping verb in the passive sentences below. Remember that it will always be the last helping verb in a passive sentence.

Lesson 52: Active and passive sentences

9. Bad weather has delayed us.

.....

10. Careless campers can start forest fires.

.....

The following sentences are also passive sentences, but they're different from the ones we've talked about so far.

15. The bank was robbed.

16. A landscaper was hired at last.

In these passive sentences, the by and the subject are missing. That is, instead of saying The bank was robbed by someone, we have the option of simply saying The bank was robbed, if we don't feel it's necessary to say by whom. This kind of passive sentence, where the subject noun phrase is missing, is called a truncated passive. Here are some more examples:

17. My dinner was prepared quickly.

18. That proposal has already been discussed.

Quick tip 52.4

A truncated passive is a passive sentence without the by and subject noun phrase. Example: The proposal was discussed.

Test yourself 52.8

Each of the sentences below is a passive sentence. Decide if it is a full passive or a truncated passive. Look for the by + noun phrase to help you decide.

Sample: The game was lost by the team.

full passive

Getting started (answers on p. 251)

- 1. The stories of his wealth have been exaggerated by others.

To enhance your understanding

Let's compare another active/passive pair of sentences:

19a. Their aunt visits the children every Christmas.

19b. The children are visited by their aunt every Christmas.

In sentence 19a, why is the verb visits rather than visit? Since their aunt is one person, we say visits. If there were more than one aunt, we'd say: Their aunts visit the children every Christmas. So in an active sentence, the first noun phrase, the subject, controls the form of the verb.

What happens when the direct object of the sentence, the children, is before the verb, as in the passive sentence 19b? You can see that the first noun phrase, the children, is now controlling the form of the verb: we say, the children are visited by their aunt every Christmas (because there is more than one child). Even though there's still only one aunt, aunt is no longer controlling the form of the verb. The important thing to keep in mind is that in a sentence it is always the noun phrase before the verb, whether or not it's doing the action, that controls the form of the verb.

Lesson 53: Positive and negative sentences

The following are all positive sentences:

1. I will think about it.
2. Timothy has called her.
3. The teacher was listening.

Can you turn them into negative sentences, using the word not? The related negative sentences are:

4. I will not think about it.
5. Timothy has not called her.
6. The teacher was not listening.

(Of course, native speakers often put not in contractions, saying, for example, I won't think about it instead of I will not think about it; we will not be focusing on the contractions in our discussion here.)

No native speaker of English would make the negative sentence something like, I will think about not it*. That's because there's a systematic relationship between positive and negative sentences, even though they don't have the same meaning. We're not usually consciously thinking about how to make a sentence negative, but we know how to do it, and we do it in a consistent way.

Can you figure out exactly where you put not in a sentence when you make it negative? Here are some negative sentences, with not underlined and the helping verb in bold. (See Lesson 31 for a reminder about helping verbs.)

7. I am not going there next week.
8. That phone might not work.
9. She has not written to me often.

Where does the not go? You can see that it goes right after the helping verb.

What if a sentence has more than one helping verb? Again, the not in each sentence below is underlined; the helping verbs are in bold.

10. That phone should not have worked.
11. She has not been writing to me often.
12. Those people should not have been attending the conference.

What pattern do you notice? You can see that not is always placed after the first helping verb.

Quick tip 53.1

A sentence is made negative by inserting not after the first helping verb.

Test yourself 53.1

For each of the sentences below, insert the word not to make the sentence negative.

Sample: I should turn around. I should not turn around.

Lesson 53: Positive and negative sentences

Getting started (answers on p. 251)

1. Nate has been busy lately.

.....

2. You might ask your father.

.....

3. Interest rates are going up.

.....

4. It could have been a hurricane.

5. I will be playing soccer tomorrow.

More practice (answers on the website)

6. George has had enough.

.....

7. She could have been saying that.

.....

8. He was being photographed.

.....

9. This company was sued for fraud.

.....

10. I can be persuaded to change my mind.

.....

Now make the following sentence negative:

13. I went there last week.

You probably ended up with the following:

14. I did not go there last week.

How did did end up here? Let's look at some more examples to figure it out:

15a. She writes to me often.

15b. She does not write to me often.

16a. Many important people attended the conference.

16b. Many important people did not attend the conference.

If we look at one of these sentences, such as I went there last week, we can see that it has a main verb, went, but no helping verb. So when a sentence has no helping verb but we need one, for example, to make the sentence negative, we use a form of do as the helping verb. Notice that in that case, the tense information is not on the main verb, but on the form of do instead (do, does, did). This is exactly as expected. You may recall from Lesson 37 that

UNIT 17: RELATED SENTENCES

tense is always indicated by the first verb; since do, and not the main verb, is the first verb in the sentence, it is the one that carries the tense information. This leaves the main verb in its base form. (The same is true for person and number information, distinguishing between do and does.)

Test yourself 53.2

For each of the sentences below, insert the word not where it is needed to make the sentence negative. Some sentences will have helping verbs; some will not, so insert the appropriate form of do where it is needed.

Sample: The soldier helped his comrade to his feet. The soldier did not help his comrade to his feet.

8. She has been a waitress for a long time.

.....

9. He tries to write poetry twice a week.

.....

10. This could be happening to you.

.....

Quick tip 53.2

In negative sentences, we use a form of do as the helping verb if the sentence does not have any other helping verb. Example: He does not like spaghetti.

There is one main verb that doesn't use do to form a negative sentence, even when the sentence has no helping verb: that exception is be. In these next examples, there is no helping verb, just the main verb be (underlined); you can see that no form of do is needed to form a negative sentence.

- 17a. She is awake now. (positive sentence)
17b. She is not awake now. (negative sentence)
18a. The judges were in their chambers. (positive sentence)
18b. The judges were not in their chambers. (negative sentence)

List of Quick tips

Unit 1: Nouns

Quick tip 1.1 If you can put the word the in front of a word and it sounds like a unit, the word is a noun.

Quick tip 2.1 Concrete nouns refer to things we can perceive with one of our senses. Abstract nouns cannot be perceived by our senses.

Quick tip 2.2 If you can put his in front of a word and it sounds like a unit, the word is a noun.

Quick tip 4.1 Animate nouns refer to things that are alive; inanimate nouns refer to things that are not alive.

Quick tip 5.1 If you can pluralize a noun in a sentence, it is functioning as a count noun.

Quick tip 5.2 If you can use many with a noun (when it is pluralized), it's a count noun. If you can use much with a noun, it's a noncount noun.

Quick tip 5.3 If you can use fewer with a noun (when it is pluralized), it's a count noun. If you can use less with a noun, it's a noncount noun.

Quick tip 6.1 Nouns that are actual names, for example Mary, are called proper nouns. Nouns that are not names are called common nouns, e.g. girl.

Quick tip 6.2 One way to identify a proper noun is to ask yourself: is this a noun I would capitalize, no matter where it is in a sentence? If so, it's a proper noun.

Unit 2: Verbs

Quick tip 7.1 If a word can have should in front of it and the phrase sounds complete, the word is a verb. Examples: should leave, should sail, should discover, should complain. Leave, sail, discover, and complain are all verbs.

Quick tip 7.2 If a word can have to in front of it and the phrase sounds complete, it's a verb. Examples: to leave, to sail, to discover, to complain. Leave, sail, discover, and complain are all verbs. (Note that we're not talking here about two, too, or the to that indicates direction, as in Let's go to the park.)

Quick tip 9.1 The forms of the irregular verb be are: am, are, is, was, were, be, been, being.

Quick tip 9.2 If you can substitute a form of be for a verb and the meaning of the sentence is basically the same, the verb is probably being used as a linking verb. The verb be and its forms are also linking verbs.

Quick tip 9.3 If you can substitute a form of seem for a verb and the meaning of the sentence is basically the same, the verb is probably being used as a linking verb.

List of Quick tips

Quick tip 9.4 Linking verbs are followed or modified by adjectives, while action verbs are followed or modified by adverbs.

Quick tip 10.1 Action verbs that act upon something are called transitive verbs. Action verbs that do not act upon something are called intransitive verbs.

Quick tip 10.2 If a verb (in any of its forms) can be put in one of the following slots, it is transitive: (a) What did you _____? (b) Who did you _____? If a verb cannot be put in one of these slots, it is intransitive.

Quick tip 10.3 If a verb (in one of its forms) can be put in one of the following slots, it is transitive: (a) He _____ something. (b) He _____ someone.

Quick tip 10.4 If a verb (in one of its forms) can be put in the following slot, it is intransitive: He _____.

Quick tip 10.5 Some verbs can be either transitive or transitive. These can occur in both of the following slots: (a) He _____ something / someone. (b) He _____.

Quick tip 11.1 If you can substitute a single verb for a verb and the word following it, you probably have a phrasal verb. For example, you can say, She pointed out the truth to us or She showed the truth to us. Point out is a phrasal verb.

Quick tip 11.2 If you can move a particle away from its verb, you have a phrasal verb. For example, since you can say both She looked up the answer and She looked the answer up, look up is a phrasal verb.

Unit 3: Determiners

Quick tip 12.1 There are only three articles in English: the, a and an.

Quick tip 13.1 There are only four demonstratives in English: this, that, these, and those.

Quick tip 14.1 The determiner possessive pronouns are: my, your, his, her, its, our, their.

Quick tip 15.1 Words of quantity, quantifiers, can act as determiners and precede a noun. Some examples are: all, some, several, and much.

Unit 4: Adjectives

Quick tip 16.1 If you can put a word between the and a noun (for example, the _____ boy), then that word is an adjective.

Unit 5: Prepositions

Quick tip 17.1 Prepositions are words, usually small, that typically indicate information about direction, location, or time. There is only a small number of prepositions in English. Some commonly used examples are at, from, in, on, and to.

Quick tip 17.2 If you can put a word in one of the empty slots in one of the following sentences, the word is a preposition: I walked _____ the table. It happened _____ that time.

Unit 6: Conjunctions

Quick tip 18.1 There are three common coordinating conjunctions in English. They are: and, or, and but. Four less common ones are for, so, yet, and nor.

Quick tip 18.2 A commonly used way to remember the coordinating conjunctions is to think of FANBOYS: F (for), A (and), N (nor), B (but), O (or), Y (yet), S (so).

Quick tip 19.1 Subordinating conjunctions connect a sentence with another sentence, which is a subpart of it. The subpart sentence is called a dependent clause (or subordinate clause). In the following sentence, the subordinating conjunction is underlined and the dependent clause is in italics: Nick decided to try to escape, although he knew his chances were slim.)

Quick tip 19.2 The subordinating conjunction is always the first word of the dependent clause.

Quick tip 20.1 Correlative conjunctions are two-part conjunctions. Common correlative conjunctions are: both /and, either /or, if /then, neither /nor.

Unit 7: Pronouns

Quick tip 21.1 The subject pronouns are: I, you, he, she, it, we, they.

Quick tip 21.2 The object pronouns are: me, you, her, him, it, us, them.

Quick tip 22.1 The reflexive pronouns are: myself, yourself, himself, herself, itself, ourselves, yourselves, themselves.

Quick tip 22.2 All the reflexive pronouns end in -self (singular) or -selves (plural).

Quick tip 23.1 There are only four demonstrative pronouns: this, that, these, and those.

Quick tip 24.1 Nominal possessive pronouns replace a whole noun (or noun phrase). For example, instead of saying That book is Sally's book we can simply say, That book is hers. The nominal possessive pronouns are: mine, yours, his, hers, its, ours, theirs.

Quick tip 25.1 Interrogative pronouns are question words. The interrogative pronouns are: how, what, when, where, which, who, whom, whose, why. Look for the question mark to help find them.

Quick tip 26.1 The common relative pronouns are: that, which, who, whom, whose. They refer back to a noun in the sentence.

Quick tip 26.2 Relative pronouns are a type of subordinating conjunction. A relative pronoun typically occurs soon after the noun it refers to. Example: He liked the teacher who gave easy tests.

Unit 8: Adverbs

Quick tip 27.1 Adverbs generally indicate information about location, time, degree, and manner. They provide extra information about the action in a sentence, about adjectives and about other adverbs.

Quick tip 27.2 If you don't know what else a word is (and you've eliminated the other parts of speech), it's probably an adverb.

Quick tip 27.3 Can the word go in the following slot? Mary slept _____. If so, it's probably an adverb. For example, Mary slept peacefully. Peacefully is an adverb.

Quick tip 27.4 Can the word go in the following slot? _____, I gave / will give my speech. If so, it's probably an adverb. For example, Yesterday, I gave my speech. Yesterday is an adverb. Or: Tomorrow, I will give my speech. Tomorrow is an adverb.

Quick tip 27.5 Can the word go in the following slot? He is _____ happy. If so, it's probably an adverb. For example, He is very happy. Very is an adverb.

Quick tip 27.6 Does the word end in the suffix -ly? Is it an adjective? If it ends in -ly and it's not an adjective, it's probably an adverb (e.g. hopefully, happily, unusually).

Unit 9: Noun phrases

Quick tip 28.1 A noun phrase can consist of a noun alone, for example audiences, John.

Quick tip 28.2 A noun phrase can consist of a determiner, one or more adjectives, and a noun. The determiner and adjective(s) are optional.

Quick tip 28.3 A noun phrase can consist of just a pronoun, for example he or them.

Unit 10: Prepositional phrases

Quick tip 29.1 A prepositional phrase consists of a preposition plus a noun phrase, for example in the closet.

Unit 11: Verb phrases

Quick tip 30.1 Every verb phrase contains a verb, for example laughs, left.

Quick tip 30.2 A verb phrase can consist of a verb plus a noun phrase, for example chased the ball.

Quick tip 30.3 A verb phrase can consist of a linking verb plus an adjective, for example is tall.

Quick tip 30.4 A verb phrase can consist of a verb plus a prepositional phrase, for example drove to the mall.

Quick tip 30.5 A verb phrase can consist of a verb plus a noun phrase plus a prepositional phrase, for example drove her friend to the mall.

Unit 12: Auxiliary phrases

Quick tip 31.1 The basic helping verbs of English are:

- a. can may shall will must
could might should would
- b. have has had
- c. am are is
was were
be been being

Quick tip 31.2 If a sentence has both a main verb and a helping verb, the main verb is always last.

Quick tip 32.1 One kind of helping verb is called a modal. The basic modals of English are:

can	could
may	might
shall	should will	would must

Quick tip 33.1 One kind of helping verb is the verb have. It has three forms: have, has, and had.

Quick tip 33.2 Have can be used as a helping verb or as a main verb. When have is used as the main verb, it refers to the idea of possession. When have is used as the helping verb, it is always followed by another verb.

Quick tip 34.1 One kind of helping verb is be. It has the following forms: am, is, are, was, were, be, been, and being.

Quick tip 34.2 Be and its forms can be used as a helping verb or as a main verb. When be is used as the helping verb, it is always followed by another verb.

Quick tip 35.1 A sentence can have zero, one, or more than one helping verb. If there is more than one, they will always be in the following relative order: modal + have + be.

Quick tip 36.1 When the helping verb is progressive be, the next verb always has -ing added to its base form. Example: is sleeping. The -ing verb form is called the present participle.

Quick tip 36.2 When have is the helping verb, the next verb typically has -ed or -en added to its base form. Examples: has eaten, have watched. The verb form following the helping verb have is called the past participle.

Quick tip 36.3 When the helping verb is a modal, the next verb is always in its base form. Example: can study.

Quick tip 36.4 A noun that consists of a verb and the suffix -ing is called a gerund. Example: Entertain-ing is fun.

Quick tip 37.1 Time refers to a point in real life at which something occurs. Tense refers to the grammatical form of a verb.

Quick tip 37.2 Tense information is always indicated by the first verb in the sentence, excluding modals.

Quick tip 37.3 Sentences with no helping verb are in either the present or past tense, depending on the form of the verb.

Quick tip 37.4 Sentences with will followed by the main verb are in the future tense.

Quick tip 37.5 If a sentence has a form of have as a helping verb, it will have the word perfect as part of the name of its tense.

Quick tip 37.6 The present tense forms of have are have and has. The past tense form of have is had.

Quick tip 37.7 If a sentence has will as a helping verb, it will have the word future as part of the name of its tense.

Quick tip 37.8 If a sentence has a form of be as a helping verb, it will have the word progressive as part of the name of its tense.

Quick tip 37.9 The present tense forms of be are am, is, and are. The past tense forms of be are was and were.

Unit 13: Subjects and objects

Quick tip 38.1 If the main verb of the sentence is an action verb, the subject of the sentence is the doer of the action and generally comes before the verb. It can be found by answering the question: "Who or what is doing the action?"

Quick tip 38.2 If the main verb of the sentence is a linking verb, the subject is who or what the sentence is about; the subject is found before the verb.

Quick tip 39.1 The direct object of a sentence is receiving the action. It can usually be found by answering the question: "Who or what is being acted upon or receiving the action?" The direct object typically occurs immediately after the verb.

Quick tip 40.1 The indirect object of a sentence can be found by answering the question: "Who or what is receiving the direct object?"

Quick tip 40.2 An indirect object can occur: (a) after the direct object (which follows the verb), with to or for introducing it, or (b) before the direct object (and after the verb), without to or for. For example: Joan gave a present to Bill or Joan gave Bill a present. (Bill is the indirect object in both sentences.)

Quick tip 40.3 To help you decide if a sentence has an indirect object, see if the sentence can be changed from a pattern like The boys left a note for their teacher to a sentence with a pattern like The boys left their teacher a note, or vice versa.

Quick tip 40.4 If the direct object is a pronoun, it must come before the indirect object. Example: My sister sent it to her friend, My sister sent her friend it*.

Quick tip 41.1 A subject pronoun is used when it is functioning as the subject of the sentence. An object pronoun is used when it is functioning as: (a) the direct object of the sentence; (b) the indirect object of the sentence; (c) the object of a preposition.

Quick tip 42.1 The subject of commands is an understood or implied you.

Unit 14: Compound phrases

Quick tip 43.1 Two noun phrases joined by a coordinating conjunction is called a compound noun phrase.

Quick tip 44.1 Two verb phrases joined by a coordinating conjunction is called a compound verb phrase.

Unit 15: The Functions of sentences

Quick tip 45.1 Sentences that make a statement are called declaratives; sentences that ask a question are called interrogatives; sentences that give a command are called imperatives; sentences that express strong emotion are called exclamations.

Quick tip 45.2 A yes/no question is one that can be answered by "yes" or "no."

Quick tip 45.3 A wh- question begins with one of the following wh- words (question words): when, where, what, why, which, who, whom, how. Example: Where is the meeting?

Quick tip 45.4 A tag question contains a statement followed by a tag, such as could you? aren't they? hasn't he? Example: She is leaving soon, isn't she?

Unit 16: Combining sentences

Quick tip 46.1 A clause is a free-standing sentence or a sentence within a sentence; a clause or sentence contains at least a subject and a main verb.

Quick tip 46.2 A sentence can contain one or more clauses.

Quick tip 46.3 A sentence that contains only one clause, that is, one subject and one verb phrase, is called a simple sentence.

Quick tip 47.1 A sentence that is made up of two or more sentences (clauses) joined by a coordinating conjunction (most commonly and, or, and but) is called a compound sentence.

Quick tip 48.1 A complex sentence consists of at least two sentences (clauses): a main clause and a dependent clause. The dependent clause is a subpart of the main clause and adds information to it. Example, with the dependent clause underlined: Sally visited her before she moved.

Quick tip 48.2 A dependent clause is joined to another clause by a subordinating conjunction such as although, if, where.

Quick tip 48.3 The easiest way to identify a dependent clause is to look for a subordinating conjunction and see if it's followed by a sentence. If it is, then the subordinating conjunction plus the sentence directly following it is a dependent clause.

Quick tip 48.4 In a noun clause, the subordinating conjunction that can be deleted following a main clause. Example: I think (that) it's going to rain.

Quick tip 49.1 A relative clause (adjective clause) is a kind of dependent clause; it provides additional information about a noun phrase in the main clause. Example (relative clause underlined): I brought the cookies that are on the plate.

Quick tip 49.2 Relative clauses begin with one of the relative pronouns: that, which, who, whom, whose.

Quick tip 49.3 A relative pronoun connects the relative clause to the rest of the sentence. All of the relative pronouns (except whose) also replace a noun phrase in the relative clause. (Whose replaces a determiner.)

Quick tip 49.4 A relative pronoun may be omitted before a noun phrase. Example: The movie (that) I saw was exciting.

Quick tip 49.5 A restrictive relative clause limits the noun phrase which it is modifying; a nonrestrictive relative clause does not. A nonrestrictive relative clause is separated from the main clause by pauses, and, when written, it is separated from the main clause by commas. Examples: The dogs which were friendly were being trained as Seeing Eye dogs (restrictive). The dogs, which were friendly, were being trained as Seeing Eye dogs (nonrestrictive).

Quick tip 50.1 A compound-complex sentence is a combination of a compound and a complex sentence: it has at least two main clauses and at least one dependent clause. Example: His friends were always there for William, and he appreciated the help that they often gave him.

Unit 17: Related sentences

Quick tip 52.1 Sentences with the subject before the verb are called active sentences. Example: Charley repaired this computer.

Quick tip 52.2 Sentences which do not have the subject before the verb are called passive sentences. Example: This computer was repaired by Charley.

Quick tip 52.3 The passive be helping verb is always placed after all the other helping verbs, right before the main verb. Example: The table has been set by the waitress.

Quick tip 52.4 A truncated passive is a passive sentence without the by and subject noun phrase. Example: The proposal was discussed.

Quick tip 53.1 A sentence is made negative by inserting not after the first helping verb.

Quick tip 53.2 In negative sentences, we use a form of do as the helping verb if the sentence does not have any other helping verb. Example: He does not like spaghetti.

Glossary

- abstract noun: does not have physical attributes. Example: history. Contrast concrete noun.
- action verb: indicates action. Example: go. Contrast linking verb.
- active sentence: a sentence expressed in the active voice. Contrast passive sentence.
- active (voice): a sentence in which the subject, defined in terms of meaning, occurs before the main verb. Example: A better team beat us. Contrast passive (voice).
- adjective: refers to a characteristic of a noun. See attributive adjective; predicate adjective.
- adjective clause: see relative clause.
- adverb: refers to a characteristic of a verb, adjective, or another adverb. It generally indicates information about location, time, degree, or manner. Example: quickly.
- adverbial clause: a dependent clause that functions as an adverb in the main clause of a complex sentence. Example: It is obvious where we went wrong.
- animate noun: a human or an animal. Example: child. Contrast inanimate noun.
- article: a determiner that indicates whether or not a noun is a specific one known to both the speaker and the listener. The articles are: the and a/an. See definite article; indefinite article.
- attributive adjective: occurs before a noun in a noun phrase. Example: an interesting movie. Contrast predicate adjective.
- auxiliary verb: see helping verb.
- auxiliary phrase: a phrase whose principal component is a helping (auxiliary) verb. Example: have been wondering.
- base form: see verb base.
- clause: a free-standing sentence or a sentence within a sentence. See main clause; dependent clause; adverbial clause; noun clause; relative clause.
- common noun: refers to general categories – things other than specific names. Example: book. Contrast proper noun.
- complex sentence: contains one main clause and at least one dependent clause. Example: Meredith was driving to work when she received a phone call from her mother. Contrast simple sentence; compound sentence; compound-complex sentence.
- compound-complex sentence: consists of at least two main clauses (compound) and at least one dependent clause (complex). Example: Although I like traveling with you, I am very tired and I have to finish a project in the office. Contrast simple sentence; compound sentence; complex sentence.
- compound noun phrase: contains two or more noun phrases joined by a coordinating conjunction. Example: Andy and his two sons went to the park.
- compound phrase: a phrase containing two or more linguistic units of the same type (such as noun phrases, prepositional phrases, adverbs, sentences), joined by

- a coordinating conjunction. Example: up the block and around the corner. See compound noun phrase; compound verb phrase.
- compound preposition: see phrasal preposition.
- compound sentence: contains two or more sentences joined by a coordinating conjunction. Example: You can pay me now, or you can pay me later. Contrast simple sentence; complex sentence; compound-complex sentence.
- compound verb phrase: contains two or more verb phrases joined by a coordinating conjunction. Example: He likes spaghetti but rarely orders it.
- concrete noun: possesses physical attributes. Example: table. Contrast abstract noun.
- conjunction: a function word that connects grammatical units such as words, phrases, and sentences. See coordinating conjunction; subordinating conjunction; correlative conjunction.
- continuous (aspect): see progressive (aspect).
- coordinating conjunction: connects any two units that are the same type, such as sentences (I go or he goes), nouns (milk and cookies), verbs (drink and drive), determiners (Jack's and Nancy's), prepositions (at or near), adjectives (healthy and nutritious), or adverbs (softly but forcefully). The three most common coordinating conjunctions are: and, or, and but. Four less common ones are: for, so, yet, and nor. Contrast subordinating conjunction; correlative conjunction.
- copula: the linking verb be. The forms of be are: am, are, is, was, were, be, been, being. Example: She is happy. The term is sometimes used to refer to any linking verb.
- correlative conjunction: a two-part conjunction. Common correlative conjunctions are: both | and, either | or, if | then, and neither | nor. Example: Either I cook or we order take-out. Contrast coordinating conjunction; subordinating conjunction.
- count noun: a noun that is countable. Count nouns can be used with the determiners a/an, many (as opposed to much), and fewer (as opposed to less), and can have plural forms. Example: a book, many books, fewer books. Contrast noncount noun.
- declarative sentence: expresses a statement. Example: The sun rises every morning. Compare imperative sentence; interrogative sentence; exclamation.
- definite article: the determiner the, used with a noun that has specific identity. Example: the final exam. Contrast indefinite article.
- demonstrative: a determiner or pronoun whose reference is defined in context, “pointing” to something or someone. See demonstrative determiner; demonstrative pronoun.
- demonstrative adjective: see demonstrative determiner.
- demonstrative determiner: this and that (singular) and these and those (plural) when used before a noun. Example: this morning. Also called demonstrative adjective. Contrast demonstrative pronoun.
- demonstrative pronoun: this, that, these, those when used alone, without a following noun. Example: I want this. Contrast demonstrative determiner.
- dependent clause: the secondary clause in a complex sentence in terms of meaning and structure, forming a subpart of the main clause. Example: Many people feel

- good in the morning after they've had a good night's sleep.* Also called subordinate clause. Contrast main clause.
- determiner: one of several types of words occurring before a noun. Example: some people. See article; demonstrative; possessive; quantifier; interrogative determiner.
- determiner possessive pronoun: a possessive pronoun used before a noun. Example: our decision. The determiner possessive pronouns are: my, your, his, her, its, our, their. Also called possessive pronoun with determiner function; possessive adjective. Contrast nominal possessive pronoun.
- direct object: a noun phrase that functions as the recipient of the subject's action. In most sentences, expressed in the active voice, the direct object occurs after the main verb. Example: We met Anne in the restaurant. Also called object. Contrast subject; indirect object.
- exclamation: a sentence that expresses strong emotion and does not necessarily contain a subject and a main verb. Example: What a day! Contrast declarative sentence; imperative sentence; interrogative sentence.
- first person pronoun: see personal pronoun.
- future perfect progressive tense: indicated by the modal will (or shall) and perfect have helping verbs followed by the been (past participle) form of the progressive be helping verb and the present participle form of the next verb. Example: My students will have been studying.
- future perfect tense: indicated by the modal will (or shall) helping verb followed by perfect have and the past participle of the next verb. Example: My students will have studied.
- future progressive tense: indicated by the modal will (or shall) and progressive be helping verbs followed by the present participle form of the next verb. Example: My students will be studying.
- future tense: indicated when the modal helping verb will (or shall) is followed by the main verb. Example: My students will study. Also called simple future tense.
- gerund: a noun that is derived from a verb by adding the suffix -ing. Example: Cooking is fun.
- grammatical function: the role a linguistic unit plays with respect to other units within a grammatical structure. Example: the noun Anne functions as the subject in the sentence Anne went to sleep, as the direct object in the sentence We met Anne in the restaurant, and as the indirect object in the sentence Someone sent a present to Anne. Also called grammatical relation.
- grammatical relation: see grammatical function.
- helping verb: a verb that augments the main verb and as such belongs to an auxiliary phrase. Example: I might call you today. Also called auxiliary verb. See modal; perfect have; progressive be; passive be. Contrast main verb.
- human (animate) noun: a person. Contrast nonhuman noun; nonhuman animate noun.
- hypercorrection: producing an incorrect form by applying a general rule beyond its correct domain ("overapplying" a rule). Example: When producing I feel badly* instead of I feel bad, the use of an adverb to modify action verbs is extended to linking verbs as well.
- imperative sentence: a command. Example: Give me a hug! Contrast declarative sentence; interrogative sentence; exclamation.

inanimate noun: a thing. Contrast animate noun.

indefinite article: the determiner a/an, used before a singular noun whose identity is not specific. The a variant is used when the next word begins with a consonant sound; the an variant is used when the next word begins with a vowel sound.

Example: a mystery; an experience. Contrast definite article.

independent clause: see main clause.

indirect object: a noun phrase that functions as the recipient of the direct object. In most sentences, expressed in the active voice, the indirect object occurs after the main verb, either before the direct object or after it. Example: Someone sent Anne a present; Someone sent a present to Anne. Contrast subject; direct object.

infinitive: either the verb base (example: read) or to + verb base (example: to read).

interrogative determiner: question word occurring before a noun. The interrogative determiners are: which, whose, what. Example: Which option do you prefer? Contrast interrogative pronoun.

interrogative pronoun: question word used alone, without a following noun.

Common interrogative pronouns are: how, what, when, where, which, who, whom, whose, why. Example: Which do you prefer? Contrast interrogative determiner.

interrogative sentence: expresses a question. Example: Are we having fun? See yes/no question; wh-question; tag question. Contrast declarative sentence; interrogative sentence; exclamation.

intransitive verb: does not act on something; it is not followed by a direct object.

Example: I sleep. Contrast transitive verb.

irregular plural: formed by means other than adding -(e)s to a noun. Example: geese. Contrast regular plural.

irregular verb: does not form its past tense by adding the suffix -ed. Example: see (past tense saw). Contrast regular verb.

linking verb: a verb which does not express action. Rather, its main function is to relate (link) the subject to a complement. Example: They seemed anxious. The most common linking verb is be (see copula). Contrast action verb.

main clause: the primary clause in a complex sentence in terms of meaning and structure. Example: Many people feel good in the morning after they've had a good night's sleep. Also called independent clause. Contrast dependent clause.

main verb: the principal verb of a sentence or phrase; it belongs to a verb phrase.

Example: I might call you today. Contrast helping verb.

mass noun: see noncount noun.

modal: a type of helping verb that expresses categories of modality, such as possibility and necessity. Example: I might visit you tomorrow. See phrasal modal.

negative sentence: expresses negation by including the word not after the first helping verb. Example: You have not been honest with me. Compare positive sentence.

nominal possessive pronoun: a possessive pronoun used alone, without a following noun. The nominal possessive pronouns are: mine, yours, his, hers, its, ours, theirs. Example: That book is hers. Contrast determiner possessive pronoun.

noncount noun: a noun that is not countable. Noncount nouns can be used with the determiners much (as opposed to many) and less (as opposed to fewer), but not with the indefinite article a/an, and they do not have plural forms. Example: much *furniture; less furniture; *a furniture; furnitures. Also called mass nouns.

Contrast count noun.

nonhuman animate noun: an animal. Contrast human animate noun.

nonhuman noun: an animal or a thing. Contrast human noun.

nonrestrictive relative clause: does not limit the reference of the noun phrase it modifies. Example: All the students, who studied hard, did well on the final exam, meaning that all students did well on the final exam and all students studied hard.

Compare restrictive relative clause.

noun: commonly defined as referring to a person, place, thing, or idea. It is the principal component of a noun phrase (except when replaced by a pronoun). See abstract noun; animate noun; common noun; concrete noun; count noun; human (animate) noun; inanimate noun; noncount noun; nonhuman animate noun; nonhuman noun; possessive common noun; possessive proper noun; proper noun.

noun clause: a dependent clause that functions as a noun phrase in the main clause of a complex sentence. Example: It is obvious that you are a learned woman.

noun phrase: a phrase whose principal component is a noun, or its replacement, a pronoun. It fulfills various grammatical functions within a sentence, such as subject, direct object, and indirect object. Example: these flowers; you.

number: a grammatical category that refers to the distinction between singular (one entity) and plural (more than one entity) in nouns and pronouns. Example: bush, I (singular); bushes, we (plural).

object: refers to direct object, indirect object, or object of a preposition.

object of a preposition: the noun phrase that follows the preposition in a prepositional phrase. Example: to us.

object pronoun: the form of a personal pronoun that is used when the pronoun has an object function. This happens when the personal pronoun is the direct object, indirect object, or object of a preposition. Example: George saw her (direct object); George sent her a message (indirect object); George heard from her (object of a preposition). The object pronouns are: me, you, her, him, it, us, them. Contrast subject pronoun.

particle: the second word in a phrasal verb. It follows the verb, from which it can be separated. Example: We looked up the answer | We looked the answer up.

passive (voice): the structural configuration of a sentence in which the subject, defined in terms of meaning, does not occur before the main verb. The main verb appears in its past participle form, preceded by the helping verb passive be. Example: We were beaten by a better team. Contrast active (voice).

passive be: the verb used in the formation of the passive voice.

passive sentence: a sentence expressed in the passive voice. See truncated passive. Contrast active sentence.

past participle: a verb form most commonly ending in the suffix -ed or -en (other forms exist). It is used in the formation of the perfect aspect and the passive voice. Example: We were beaten by a better team.

past perfect progressive tense: indicated by the had form of the perfect have helping verb followed by the been (past participle) form of the progressive be helping verb and the present participle form of the next verb. Example: My students had been studying.

- past perfect tense: indicated by the had form of the perfect have helping verb and the past participle form of the next verb. Example: My students had studied.
- past progressive tense: indicated by the was or were form of the progressive be helping verb and the present participle form of the next verb. Example: My students were studying.
- past tense: indicated when the main verb is not preceded by a helping verb and has the suffix -ed added to its base. Example: My students studied. Also called simple past tense. See irregular verb for exceptions.
- perfect (aspect): indicates a time period prior to another time period. It is expressed by perfect have plus the past participle form of the following verb. Example: We have eaten already.
- perfect have: the helping verb used in the formation of the perfect aspect.
- periphrastic modal: see phrasal modal.
- personal pronoun: a type of pronoun that has different forms, depending on whether it refers to the speaker (first person), listener (second person), or anyone/anything else (third person). See object pronoun; possessive pronoun; reflexive pronoun; subject pronoun.
- phrasal modal: a modal consisting of more than one word. Example: You are able to do this.
- phrasal preposition: a preposition consisting of more than one word. Example: across from.
- phrasal verb: a verb consisting of two words. Example: She pointed out the truth. See: particle.
- phrase: a group of related words forming a grammatical unit that does not have both a subject and a main verb. A phrase may also contain a single word if that word is defined as the principal component of the phrase. Example: verb phrases may contain a number of words (writes a message), or just one word (writes). See auxiliary phrase; compound phrase; noun phrase; prepositional phrase; verb phrase.
- plural: see number.
- plural pronoun: see number
- positive sentence: expresses an assertion. Example: You have been honest with me.
Compare negative sentence.
- possessive: indicates to whom or to what a noun phrase belongs. See possessive pronoun; possessive proper noun; possessive common noun.
- possessive adjective: see determiner possessive pronoun.
- possessive common noun: functions as an adjective when preceding a noun.
Example: The girl's shoes.
- possessive pronoun: see determiner possessive pronoun; nominal possessive pronoun.
- possessive pronoun with determiner function: see determiner possessive pronoun.
- possessive pronoun with nominal function: see nominal possessive pronoun.
- possessive proper noun: functions as a determiner in a noun phrase. Example: Mary's red shoes. See proper noun.
- predicate adjective: occurs following a linking verb in a verb phrase. Example: The movie was interesting. Contrast attributive adjective.

- preposition: a function word before a noun phrase that typically indicates information about direction, location, or time. Example: from the kitchen. See phrasal preposition.
- prepositional phrase: a phrase consisting of a preposition and a noun phrase. Example: in the store.
- present participle: a verb form ending in the suffix -ing. It is used in the formation of the progressive aspect.
- present perfect progressive tense: indicated by the have or has form of the perfect have helping verb followed by the been (participle) form of the progressive be helping verb and the present participle form of the next verb. Example: My students have been studying.
- present perfect tense: indicated by the have or has form of the perfect have helping verb and the past participle form of the next verb. Example: My student has studied.
- present progressive tense: indicated by the am, are, or is form of the progressive be helping verb and the present participle form of the next verb. Example: My students are studying.
- present tense: indicated when the main verb is not preceded by a helping verb and its form corresponds to the verb base or verb base followed by -(e)s (be is a notable exception). Example: My students study; My student studies. Also called simple present tense.
- progressive (aspect): information that the duration of the action or state signified by the main verb extends over a period of time. It is expressed by progressive be jointly with the present participle of the following verb. Example: We are eating dinner.
- progressive be: the helping verb used in the formation of the progressive aspect.
- pronoun: a function word that replaces (stands in for) a linguistic unit, most commonly a noun phrase. See demonstrative pronoun; interrogative pronoun; personal pronoun; relative pronoun.
- proper noun: refers to a specific name; begins with capital letters. Example: New York. Contrast: common noun.
- quantifier: a determiner that indicates amount or quantity. Example: all topics.
- reflexive pronoun: replaces the second of two noun phrases that refer to the same person or thing within the same clause. The reflexive pronouns are: myself, yourself, himself, herself, itself, ourselves, yourselves, themselves. Example: Harry saw himself in the mirror.
- regular plural: formed with the suffix -(e)s added to nouns. Example: gardens, boxes. Contrast irregular plural.
- regular verb: forms its past tense by adding the suffix -ed to the verb base. Example: walk (past tense walked). Contrast irregular verb.
- relative clause: a dependent clause that adds information about a noun phrase in the main clause of a complex sentence. A relative clause is introduced by a relative pronoun, which may be omitted before a noun phrase. Example: The ice-cream (that) you bought for me tastes delicious. See restrictive relative clause; non-restrictive relative clause.
- relative pronoun: a subordinating conjunction which introduces a relative clause and refers back to the preceding noun phrase. Example: He liked the teacher who gave easy tests. The common relative pronouns are: that, which, who, whom, whose. Other relative pronouns, such as whatever, whoever, whomever, whosever (all ending in -ever), represent, rather than refer back to, a noun phrase. Example: They can travel with whomever they choose.

restrictive relative clause: limits the reference of the noun phrase it modifies.

Example: All the students who studied hard did well on the final exam, meaning that all and only those students did well on the final exam who studied hard. Compare non-restrictive relative clause.

second person pronoun: see personal pronoun.

sentence: minimally contains a subject and a main verb, except for exclamations and imperatives. See active sentence; clause; complex sentence; complex-compound sentence; compound sentence; declarative sentence; exclamation; imperative sentence; interrogative sentence; negative sentence; passive sentence; positive sentence; simple sentence.

simple future tense: see future tense.

simple past tense: see past tense.

simple present tense: see present tense.

simple sentence: made up of just one sentence (contains only one clause). Example:

Paris is the capital of France. Contrast compound sentence; complex sentence; compound-complex sentence.

singular: see number.

singular pronoun: see number.

subject: a noun phrase that functions as the performer of an action verb or the topic of a linking verb. In most sentences, expressed in the active voice, the subject occurs before the verb. Example: Anne went to sleep; Anne is a dentist. Contrast direct object; indirect object.

subject pronoun: the form of a personal pronoun that is used when the pronoun functions as the subject. The subject pronouns are: I, you, he, she, it, we, they.

Example: He is happy. Contrast object pronoun.

subordinate clause: see dependent clause.

subordinating conjunction: connects the main clause and the dependent clause in a complex sentence. Example: Many people feel good in the morning after they've had a good night's sleep. Contrast coordinating conjunction; correlative conjunction.

tag question: a statement followed by a question "tag." Example: She is leaving, isn't she? Contrast yes/no question; wh-question.

tense: the form of a verb through which a grammar indicates information about time. See future tense; future perfect tense; future perfect progressive tense; future progressive tense; past tense; past perfect tense; past perfect progressive tense; past progressive tense; present tense; present perfect tense; present perfect progressive tense; present progressive tense.

third person pronoun: see personal pronoun.

transitive verb: acts on something; it is followed by a direct object. Example: I threw the ball. Contrast intransitive verb.

truncated passive: a passive sentence in which the subject, defined in terms of meaning, is not expressed. Example: The proposal was discussed.

verb: the principal component of a verb phrase. It indicates action or state of being.

See action verb; helping verb; intransitive verb; irregular verb; linking verb; main verb; phrasal verb; regular verb; transitive verb; verb base.

verb base: the form of a verb that contains no grammatical information. It occurs in the infinitive expression, among others. Example: to go.

verb complement: a unit that occurs after a linking verb and refers back to the subject. Example: The patient seemed anxious.

verb phrase: a phrase whose principal component is a main verb. Example: saw a movie.

wh-question: begins with a wh-word (interrogative pronoun). Example: Where is the meeting? Contrast yes/no question; tag question.

yes/no question: can be answered with a “yes” or “no.” Example: Is today Sunday? Contrast wh-question; tag question.
